BERLIN (AP)—A roaring gasoline blaze consumed the bodies of Adolf Hitler and his bride Eva Braun while about 10 men of Hitler's staff watched in the garden outside the Fuehrer's Berlin air raid shelter in 1945.

That was the story, bottled up by the Russians for 10 years, told as an eye witness account by Heinz Linge, Hitler's valet, who returned over the week end from a decade of captivity in the Soviet Union.

"Hitler shot himself, Eva Braun took poison," said Linge in an interview here yesterday. "I carried his body out of the bunker, and then helped pour gasoline over it. We watched it burn for about five minutes."

The body of Eva, Hitler's mistress until he married her the day before the double suicide, was carried out from the underground boudoir and dumped on the grass in the Chancellery garden by Otto Guensche, an adjutant, while Soviet artillery shells were flying overhead, Linge said. Hitler's chauffeur had tried to carry out the body, but it was too heavy for him.

Linge's story was matched in part by another returning POW, SS Gen. Hans Baur, Hitler's personal pilot.

Baur told newsmen at Camp Friedland in West Germany he was in the bunker April 30, the day of the suicides.

"I went into Hitler's apartment in the bunker to get my last orders," he said. "Hitler said goodbye to me then, remarking that he would now take his own life since the military situation had become hopeless."

Baur said he learned when he returned two hours later that the two had killed themselves, but he did not actually see the bodies.

Linge and Baur may be summoned to testify before a Berchtesgaden court which is expected to rule this month whether Hitler is dead. He has never been declared legally dead.

The aides' stories were substantially the same as had been reconstructed by Western investigators years ago. But the West had to wait 10 years to get their accounts first hand.

Linge said the Russians brought him back to Berlin in 1946 to reconstruct for them exactly what happened in the bunker. He was closely questioned for many days after his capture in 1945, he said. But the Russians never gave out his story and allowed doubts over Hitler's fate to circulate.

Linge and Baur were among 1,741 German prisoners returned to West Germany since last Thursday as the result of the Moscow agreement with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. The Russians have promised to free 9,626 by Oct. 20, with those from homes in East Germany to be released there.

Among more than 1,000 POWs returning on three trains Sunday was 1st Lt. Harald Krupp von Bohlen and Halbach, 39-year-old son of the late Gustav Krupp, head of the armaments family.

Most of the prisoners were on freight trains arriving at Camp

Friedland. But Linge was among 116 sent to West Berlin.

The balding, six-foot Linge, now 43, said he personally procured 50 gallons of gasoline to burn the two bodies, but more were required. Other points in his account:

Also in the bunker was Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels and his wife and six children. Goebbels and his wife ended their lives with a pistol and the children were put to death by injections given by an SS doctor. Being valet to Hitler was no picnic. The Fuehrer's nerves were bad and he needed frequent injections to steady himself. He began talking suicide 10 days before he shot himself.

Eva Braun put on a "courageous display" when the time came to end her life.

Linge said the Soviets convicted him in 1950 of helping Hitler to power. In prison his weight dropped from 198 pounds to 110 but is now back to 182.

U.S. Schedules Huge Rocket Firing Program

1957-58 To See Vast Array Of Launchings Into Upper Space

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the 18 months from July 1957 through December 1958 the United States will launch more than twice as many high-altitude rockets as it has fired in the last 10 years.

About $1.7 million has been budgeted for this effort, in addition to the $10 million expected to be spent during the same period on the much more ambitious, but closely related, space satellite project.

The details of the U. S. rocket research program during the 1957-58 International Geophysical year were discussed in a speech to the American Rocket Society here last week by Dr. Homer Newell, acting superintendent of the Atmosphere and Astral Physics Division of the Naval Research Laboratory.

The laboratory has been assigned all the rocket projects, including the satellite program. Six to 10 satellites about the size of basketballs are to be rocketed to altitudes of 200 to 800 miles in an attempt to get them there to orbit for months or longer around the earth.

NEWELL SAID that during the 1957-58 period the United States will launch:

1. A dozen Aerobee rockets from White Sands, N. M., and another 33 from Ft. Churchill on Hudson's Bay, just below the Arctic Circle in Canada. More than 140 Aerobees have already been fired, to altitudes as high as 123 miles.

2. A number of Nike-Deacon combination rockets, also at Ft. Churchill. The 25-foot - long Nike is the Army's standard anti-aircraft missile. Its power plant is attached to the Deacon rocket to give the latter added range.

3. Four dozen or more Deacon-Skyhook balloon combinations, off Greenland and northern Canada in the Arctic, a like number from ships in the Pacific off San Diego and another four to six dozen from ships on a track south from the Equator to the Antarctic.

The Skyhook balloon carries the Deacon to a height of many miles, from which the rocket is launched. The combination is called the Rockoon, and more than 30 of them have been launched, to as high as 60 miles.

4. Hundreds of Rockoons—three-inch rockets and other small types launched from jet aircraft at high altitude, in Virginia.

JERSEY CITY, N. J. (AP)—Bernarr Macfadden, physical culturist and magazine publisher suffering from a stomach disorder, was reported in serious condition today at a Jersey City hospital.

Macfadden, 87, was admitted to the hospital Friday with an ailment described by an associate as possibly caused by a three-day fast. He did not explain the reason for the fast.

Macfadden was jailed for three days last April in connection with a $9,000 alimony claim by his estranged third wife, Connie Lee.

Soviet Offers Non-Military Aid To Egypt

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—Soviet Ambassador Daniel S. Solod said today Russia has offered economic aid to Egypt.

Emerging from a meeting with Hussein Aziz, permanent undersecretary at the Egyptian Foreign Ministry, Solod said "our economic situation permits us to give aid to any country, providing that country will accept it."

Solod said his meeting with Aziz was routine and the aid offer had been made previously.

Solod declined to say if the Russian offer got a favorable answer from Egyptian officials. He emphasized that Russian economic aid was made available to other Arab states, too.

Solod said no money would be involved in the Russian aid, which would be in the form of agriculture and building equipment and other material which could be used in economic development.

Solod's announcement came on the heels of Egypt's announcement two weeks ago that she would trade cotton for arms for Communist Czechoslovakia. This aroused concern in Western countries who feared Communist infiltration in the strategic Middle East.

U.S. Prepares 2 Plans For Big 4 Huddle

Soviet Is Given Choice Of Obstructionism Or Genuine Harmony

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles said today the United States will go into this month's Big Four foreign ministers conference with two sets of plans:

One to meet any Russian obstruction and the other to exploit genuine Soviet harmony moves.

Dulles also said in a foreign policy address prepared for the 37th annual convention of the American Legion meeting here:

1. World opinion eventually will force Russia to relax its grip on East Germany and to liberate satellite peoples.

2. Soviet acceptance of President Eisenhower's plan for aerial inspection and exchange of military blueprints would provide the basis for further international disarmament controls.

"We can then confidently move on to international measures to reduce and control the instruments of death," Dulles said.

THIS COUNTRY, he said, must be prepared neither to rebuff any authentic Soviet move toward easing tensions nor to expose the United States to later "mortal danger."

Dulles and the foreign ministers of Great Britain, France and Russia will meet at Geneva beginning Oct. 27 in a follow-up to the Big Four summit conference of last summer.

Dulles told the legionnaires Soviet policy at present is to "appear friendly and to mingle with all the world." Perhaps, he said, the Soviets have a proverb something like the American one which (Continued on Page Two)

No Return To White House Seen For Ike For Months

DENVER (AP)—President Eisenhower continued to progress satisfactorily today as he cheerfully resigned himself to a long period of recovery and convalescence, which may keep him out of the White House the rest of the year.

"The President had a very good night's sleep of more than eight hours," a morning medical bulletin said. "His condition continues to progress satisfactorily without complications."

The prospects that he will retire at the end of his present term were heightened, however, by expert medical opinion that it is impossible to say now whether he will be "physically able" to run again.

While progress from his heart attack of Sept. 24 has been satisfactory, and his morale is high, he has agreed to a decision of his doctors to keep him at Fitzsimons Army Hospital for about another month.

These things became clear as the aftermath of a news conference yesterday at Lowery Air Force Base. Dr. Paul Dudley White, noted Boston heart specialist, speaking for himself and the President's bedside doctors, said:

1. The President will not fly to his farm at Gettysburg, Pa., for at least four weeks and maybe not for five more weeks.

2. Eisenhower is not "100 percent" out of danger and it still is "too early to say" whether he will have "a complete recovery," but he has passed the period when complications normally occur.

3. He thinks it should be "close to the first of the year" before the President goes back to the White House.

4. The President is "happy" at the hospital and will need a bit of work, such as his conference tomorrow with Secretary of State Dulles, to keep him from "bubbling over" and to "protect his heart from the effects of his overactive brain."

The President, who will observe his 65th birthday Friday, met with Vice President Nixon yesterday for the second day in a row, and they set up a schedule for Cabinet members and other top executives to begin visits here.

The 42-year-old Nixon, one of the men frequently mentioned in speculation over possible GOP candidates if Eisenhower bows out, found the chief executive in a gay mood when he visited him with Sherman Adams, Eisenhower's chief deputy.

The President was decked out in a loud bow tie of red and white figures on a dark green background, clipped to the collar of his gold-colored pajamas.

"The President said that he and his morning nurse had been planning that as a surprise for Mrs. Eisenhower for the last three days," Nixon reported.

Nixon said Mrs. Eisenhower told him later that she "practically rolled on the floor when she saw the setup."

Nixon said the President showed a "vital interest" in national and international problems and specified "several subjects" he wanted to talk to Cabinet members about. He didn't name them.

And Nixon told a Saturday night news conference "there was no discussion of the future as far as political problems were concerned" in his private talk with the President earlier in the day.

Personal friends of Eisenhower say they expect him to have the biggest voice in the selection of his successor as GOP nominee. They have insisted from the time of his seizure that he will not run again.

Home-To-Home Volunteers To Double-Check

Mrs. Heine Explains Recent Rains Here Interrupted Efforts

Pickaway County Community Fund workers, handling solicitation efforts in the residential districts, were reminded today that the success of the campaign may rest heavily on how much they accomplish.

The word of caution came from Mrs. Walter Heine, in charge of the residential and public employees group. She said she hoped that "all of our workers realize that only persistent efforts—going back, and back again if necessary—will enable us to turn in a good report."

Mrs. Heine pointed out that recent rains interrupted much of the door-to-door activity in her group. "But we don't want our workers to give up," she explained, "until they have actually talked with all the possible contributors, to get an answer one way or another."

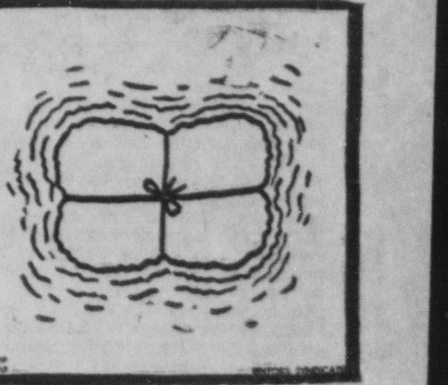

"That's the only way we're going to be able to measure the residential solicitation results."

THE Community Fund drive is the first of its kind ever held in Pickaway County. Five agencies will share in the money raised. They are: Pickaway County Red Cross, Salvation Army, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Pickaway County Youth Canteen.

Mrs. Heine said the group under her supervision has reported $1,625 so far. That amount, she stressed, is based only on partial reports from four of the neighborhood chairmen and complete reports from seven of them. Altogether, there are 20 chairmen in the group.

Like other Fund leaders, Mrs. Heine appealed to all contributors to "show the red feather" stickers or emblems, thus enabling the volunteers to hold duplication of effort to a minimum.

"BUNDLE OF NERVES" This Droodle sent in by J. B. Martin of Knoxville Tenn., is very topical. It's what the Average Man is becoming today. And no wonder when he has to worry about the Hydrogen Bomb, make out his Income Tax and watch his wife back out of the garage. What used to make me a bundle of nerves was going to the Dentist, but I worked out a psychological method of keeping calm which I'll gladly pass along to you as a public service. You can easily overcome your fear by repeating over and over: "The Dentist won't hurt me." "The Dentist won't hurt me." Keep repeating this phrase in a loud, clear voice and you'll find that the Dentist won't hurt you; because as long as you keep saying, "The Dentist won't hurt me," he can't get the drill in your mouth.

Two Local Dairies Hike Price Of Milk One Cent A Quart

Starting Tuesday, the price of milk in two local dairies here will be increased one cent a quart.

The Blue Ribbon and Guernsey dairies announced the price increase today. The manager of the Med-O-Pure Dairy was out of town and could not be reached.

Increased cost was given as the reason for the price hike in milk.

9 Congressmen Touring Moscow

MOSCOW (AP)—The largest delegation of U. S. congressmen ever inside the walls of the seat of the Soviet government visited the Kremlin today. Nine members of the House of Representatives were escorted through the place.

They were Will Hays (D-Ohio), who is traveling independently, and eight members of the communications subcommittee of the House Interstate and Foreign Trade Committee.

The congressmen, who arrived last night from Leningrad, have asked for interviews with high Soviet officials to discuss trade and an agreement permitting foreign airlines to serve Moscow.

Finder Of Beagles Staging Holdout

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Paul Tungett's offer of $10 to the finder of two lost beagle pups got results, but not the pups.

Tungett said a man answering his newspaper ad telephoned an accurate description of the dogs but held out for a bigger reward.

"That's blackmail or something, the distraught owner complained."

He said the caller hung up when he refused to up the offer. He placed a value of $25 each on the pups.

Mrs. Heine Explains Recent Rains Here Interrupted Efforts

Pickaway County Community Fund workers, handling solicitation efforts in the residential districts, were reminded today that the success of the campaign may rest heavily on how much they accomplish.

The word of caution came from Mrs. Walter Heine, in charge of the residential and public employes group. She said she hoped that "all of our workers realize that only persistent efforts—going back, and back again if necessary—will enable us to turn in a good report."

Mrs. Heine pointed out that recent rains interrupted much of the door-to-door activity in her group. "But we don't want our workers to give up," she explained, "until they have actually talked with all the possible contributors, to get an answer one way or another."

"That's the only way we're going to be able to measure the residential solicitation results."

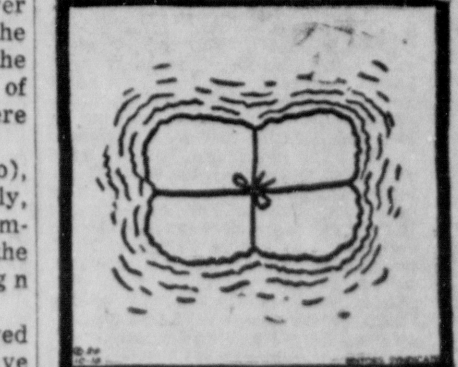

THE Community Fund drive is the first of its kind ever held in Pickaway County. Five agencies will share in the money raised. They are: Pickaway County Red Cross, Salvation Army, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Pickaway County Youth Canteen.

Mrs. Heine said the group under her supervision has reported $1,625 so far. That amount, she stressed, is based only on partial reports from four of the neighborhood chairmen and complete reports from seven of them. Altogether, there are 20 chairmen in the group.

Like other Fund leaders, Mrs. Heine appealed to all contributors to "show the red feather" stickers or emblems, thus enabling the volunteers to hold duplication of effort to a minimum.

DROODLES

By ROGER PRICE

"BUNDLE OF NERVES"
This Doodle sent in by J. B. Martin of Knoxville Tenn., is very topical. It's what the Average Man is becoming today. And no wonder when he has to worry about the Hydrogen Bomb, make out his Income Tax and watch his wife back out of the garage. What used to make me a bundle of nerves was going to the Dentist, but I worked out a psychological method of keeping calm which I'll gladly pass along to you as a public service. You can easily overcome your fear by repeating over and over: "The Dentist won't hurt me." "The Dentist won't hurt me." Keep repeating this phrase in a loud, clear voice and you'll find that the Dentist won't hurt you; because as long as you keep saying, "The Dentist won't hurt me" he can't get the drill in your mouth.

says: "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em."
Dulles said the United States loves peace but "not peace at any price."

Dulles said Russian leaders have "rapidly changed their demeanor." But, he added, "we cannot tell whether it is merely a maneuver."

Dulles, who was scheduled to fly to Denver after his speech to discuss foreign policy problems with Eisenhower, made no predictions about the outcome of the foreign ministers meeting.

Citing principles which guide American foreign policy, Dulles said that "although gravely provoked" by Communist China, the United States has avoided any violence even though "we had the power to take prompt and overwhelming reprisals."

He mentioned the imprisonment of 15 American fliers as an example of Chinese Red provocations. But, he said, the United States relied upon "moral pressures" to help the fliers and now all 15 are home free.

Dulles voiced hope the Chinese Communists will themselves accept this "renunciation of force" principle which guides the U. S.

Dulles, without mentioning names struck out at nations which practice neutrality in the current East-West ideological struggle.

"Barring exceptional cases, neutrality today is an obsolete conception," he said. "It is like asking each community to forego a police force and to leave it to each citizen to defend his own home with his own gun."

3 Names Top List Of '56 Dem Candidates

Sen. Symington Added As Adlai, Ave Still Conceal Their Plans

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The names of Averell Harriman, Adlai Stevenson and Stuart Symington are in the political spotlight as it focuses on the developing race for the 1956 Democratic presidential nomination.

Republican eyes continued to turn to the recuperating President Eisenhower: Will he run again? How about the GOP choice if he doesn't?

Harriman, the New York governor whom his state's Democratic leaders are pushing for President, has caught attention when repeatedly saying "I'm for Adlai" Stevenson, the 1952 Democratic presidential nominee.

He said that again yesterday, but this time added he has "no obligation" and is "not at all morally bound" to support Stevenson at the Democratic National Convention next year.

He said he is not now a candidate for the presidency. But he said he does not believe a man 64 years old (he will be 64 next month) is too old to serve as President.

STEVENS, who hasn't yet said whether he'll run again, got a boost from the nation's capital, where a Stevenson-for-President club was organized. J. C. Turner, vice chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of the District of Columbia, was named temporary chairman of the clubs, whose announced supporters included two members of the Democratic National Committee—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and Melvin D. Hildreth.

In Sikston, Mo., home-state backers of Sen. Symington prepared for "preliminary" discussions on a proposed "Symington-for-President" campaign at a meeting of state Democrats next Saturday.

The senator himself frequently has disclaimed any presidential aspirations for 1956.

On the Republican side, J. Howard Pyle, former governor of Arizona, who is now a presidential assistant, said there is an "even, 50-50 chance that President Eisenhower will run for reelection."

Pyle did not elaborate on this statement to an Orange County, Calif., GOL meeting except to say: "If God will spare this man for us for a few more years we will see a new era of international peace."

In Denver, heart specialist Dr. Paul Dudley White said it is impossible to say at this time whether it would be physically possible for Eisenhower to run again next year because it is too early to know whether he will make a complete recovery from his heart attack.

Harriman's claim that he is still free to choose his candidate came after a weekend visit from former President Truman. Like Harriman, Truman in the past had said he favored Stevenson, but at a news conference in Albany, N. Y., declared he was neutral.

Upon arrival at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel here yesterday, Truman reiterated: "I made it clear up there (in Albany) that I am as neutral as a man could possibly be in my position. I said it in Albany and I'll say it now: I'm making no choice until the convention. I'll back the nominee."

Lee said he believed it unconstitutional for the government to "tax its citizens for the support of foreign nations."

Lee refused a demand of the Utah Democratic Party's Executive Committee to either resign or retract his statement.

Indiana Governor Imposes Martial Law In 2 Counties

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Gov. George N. Craig today imposed martial law on New Castle and Henry County, the former being the scene of last week's riot at the Perfect Circle Co.

The governor announced he is extending the area of martial law from the Perfect Circle plant in New Castle to neighboring plants in Hagerstown and Richmond.

"The history of this transaction does not justify one's trust in it," the governor told an emergency conference of Perfect Circle officials and the CIO-United Auto Workers.

The Perfect Circle company had told the governor it doesn't feel compelled to "negotiate with law-breakers."

Craig declared: "This order will continue so long as circumstances deem it advisable."

"The condition of martial law will be for the military establishment of Indiana to maintain law and order," the governor continued.

Joan Seymour Dies As Result Of Accident

Joan Seymour, 18, of near Kinnickinnick, who apparently leaped or fell from a moving automobile last week, died in University Hospital in Columbus Sunday as a result of the injuries she received.

The incident took place on Route 180 near Route 159, not far from Chillicothe, where she had been riding with a man identified as by the Ross County Sheriff's Department as Phillip Davis, of Stoutsville Route 1.

Miss Seymour reportedly suffered a skull fracture when her head struck the pavement.

Miss Seymour was born Sept. 29, 1937 in Adelphi, a daughter of George and Mary Sheets Seymour. She was a student in the junior class of Centralia High School, where she was active in athletic activities, and was a 4-H Club member.

Surviving her are: her parents; three brothers—Larry and Danny at home, and SH-2 Roy Seymour, who is stationed with the U. S. Navy in Wickford, R. I.; and her maternal grandfather, Peter Sheets, of Circleville.

FUNERAL SERVICES will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Hill Funeral Home, Kingston. Burial will be in the Hallsboro Cemetery.

Friends may call in the funeral home after Tuesday noon.

Utah Governor Admits Cause Is Losing One

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Utah Gov. J. Bracken Lee admits that his crusade against federal income taxes is a losing one, but he hopes "to get enough attention focused on the case to make people wake up to the fact their constitutional rights have been trampled."

Meanwhile, Utah Democrats have called Lee's balk a "direct attack" on President Eisenhower and his foreign policy.

Lee, a Republican, said last week he would hold back payment of federal tax on his income over and above his gubernatorial salary of $10,000 a year in order to bring about a test case on the constitutionality of using tax money for foreign aid.

Tax is withheld on his gubernatorial salary. He said he made "over $1,000" from other sources.

The executive committee of the state Democratic party also asked that Lee resign or retract what it called his "avowed defiance" of the law. The governor said he had no intention of resigning or making a retraction.

Lee said he believed it unconstitutional for the government to "tax its citizens for the support of foreign nations."

Lee refused a demand of the Utah Democratic Party's Executive Committee to either resign or retract his statement.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

KENNETH MEADOWS
Kenneth Gordon Meadows died at 5:45 p. m. Saturday in General Hospital, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Meadows, a TV mechanic, was born Jan. 5, 1916 in Ribolt, Ky., a son of A. A. and Elizabeth Meadows. He was a veteran of World War II, having served for three years in the South Pacific.

Surviving him are: his mother, who resides in Kingston; his wife, Margaret T. Meadows of Long Beach, N. J., whom he married in 1942; two daughters, Miss Bonalee Meadows of Circleville, and Miss JoAnn Meadows of Long Beach, N. J.; two sisters, Mrs. Mary Edler of Kingston and Mrs. Thelda Large of Toledo, and a brother, William A. Meadows of Kingston.

Funeral arrangements are being completed by the Hill Funeral Home of Kingston.

Charles E. Fellers, 86, of 445 E. Main St., was hurt when his car was reportedly forced off the road by an oncoming vehicle. The mishap took place on Route 104, one mile south of Route 316.

Fellers told Deputy Carl White an oncoming tractor caused him to take to the berm and his car went out of control. Fellers had lacerations of his hands.

ROBERT B. ROSS, 44, of Laurelville Route 2, reportedly slowed down to pick up a hitch-hiker on Route 180, 14 miles southeast of here, and was struck from the rear by another car.

Ross suffered a back injury, according to Deputy White. Donald L. Smith, 19, of Adelphi, driver of the second vehicle, had a lacerated forehead, as did his passenger, 15-year old James Smith.

Smith told Deputy White he rounded a curve and did not see the stopped vehicle until it was too late.

A car making a left turn off Route 23 near the Pickaway-Ross County line into a farm lane was struck from the rear. Robert L. Rice Jr., 36, of Mt. Sterling Route 1, told Deputy Dwight Radcliff he made an arm signal prior to the turn.

Paul W. Hamilton, 20, of 441 Watt St., driver of the second car, said he saw no signal. But Deputy Radcliff said one of Hamilton's passengers allegedly admitted seeing the signal.

HAMILTON SUFFERED an injury to his left leg. Roger Davis, 19, of Stoutsville, injured his nose. Phillip Brown, 18, of Circleville Route 4, hurt his left leg. All were in Hamilton's car.

The five persons injured in the Fairfield County accident, which happened north of Stoutsville, are all in "good" condition in Berger Hospital. They include: Mr. and Mrs. Francis Arnold, of Circleville Route 1; Mrs. Thomas Weaver, of Laurelville Route 1; Mrs. Dan Hinton, of Williamsport Route 1; and Mrs. Myrtle Puckett, of 137 Watt St.

Deputy White said he received a call on the accident but found it was in Fairfield County. He said it was a one-car accident.

Auto Accident Toll Here Rises; 9 Persons Hurt Over Weekend

Four county accidents over the weekend, resulting in nine persons being injured, were reported by the sheriff's department here. In addition, five Pickaway counties were hurt in a Fairfield County accident.

Richard Butler, 18, of Chillicothe Route 1, and a passenger in his car suffered minor lacerations in a one-car accident on the Circleville-Westfall Rd. south of Route 22. Butler was arrested by Sheriff Charles Radcliff for drunk driving and fined $100 and costs, sentenced to three consecutive days in jail and had his license suspended for six months by city court.

Dulles said the United States loves peace but "not peace at any price."

Dulles said Russian leaders have "rapidly changed their demeanor." But, he added, "we cannot tell whether it is merely a maneuver."

Dulles, who was scheduled to fly to Denver after his speech to discuss foreign policy problems with Eisenhower, made no predictions about the outcome of the foreign ministers meeting.

Citing principles which guide American foreign policy, Dulles said that "although gravely provoked" by Communist China, the United States has avoided any violence even though "we had the power to take prompt and overwhelming reprisals."

He mentioned the imprisonment of 15 American fliers as an example of Chinese Red provocations. But, he said, the United States relied upon "moral pressures" to help the fliers and now all 15 are home free.

Dulles voiced hope the Chinese Communists will themselves accept this "renunciation of force" principle which guides the U. S.

Dulles, without mentioning names struck out at nations which practice neutrality in the current East-West ideological struggle.

"Barring exceptional cases, neutrality today is an obsolete conception," he said. "It is like asking each community to forego a police force and to leave it to each citizen to defend his own home with his own gun."

3 Names Top List Of '56 Dem Candidates

Sen. Symington Added As Adlai, Ave Still Conceal Their Plans

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The names of Averell Harriman, Adlai Stevenson and Stuart Symington are in the political spotlight as it focuses on the developing race for the 1956 Democratic presidential nomination.

Republican eyes continued to turn to the recuperating President Eisenhower: Will he run again? How about the GOP choice if he doesn't?

Harriman, the New York governor whom his state's Democratic leaders are pushing for President, has caught attention when repeatedly says "I'm for Adlai" Stevenson, the 1952 Democratic presidential nominee.

He said that again yesterday, but this time added he has "no obligation" and is "not at all morally bound" to support Stevenson at the Democratic National Convention next year.

He said he is not now a candidate for the presidency. But he said he does not believe a man 64 years old (he will be 64 next month) is too old to serve as President.

STEVENSON, who hasn't yet said whether he'll run again, got a boost from the nation's capital, where a Stevenson-for-President club was organized. J. C. Turner, vice chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of the District of Columbia, was named temporary chairman of the clubs, whose announced supporters included two members of the Democratic National Committee—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and Melvin D. Hildreth.

In Siketon, Mo., home-state backers of Sen. Symington prepared for "preliminary" discussions on a proposed "Symington-for-President" campaign at a meeting of state Democrats next Saturday. The senator himself frequently has disclaimed any presidential aspirations for 1956.

On the Republican side, J. Howard Pyle, former governor of Arizona, who is now a presidential assistant, said there is an "even, 50-50 chance that President Eisenhower will run for reelection."

Pyle did not elaborate on this statement to an Orange County, Calif., GOL meeting except to say: "If God will spare this man for us for a few more years we will see a new era of international peace."

In Denver, heart specialist Dr. Paul Dudley White said it is impossible to say at this time whether it would be physically possible for Eisenhower to run again next year because it is too early to know whether he will make a complete recovery from his heart attack.

Harriman's claim that he is still free to choose his candidate came after a weekend visit from former President Truman. Like Harriman, Truman in the past had said he favored Stevenson, but at a news conference in Albany, N. Y., declared he was neutral.

Upon arrival at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel here yesterday, Truman reiterated: "I made it clear up there (in Albany) that I am as neutral as a man could possibly be in my position. I said it in Albany and I'll say it now: I'm making no choice until the convention. I'll back the nominee."

Mrs. Rupert Welliver and daughter of Stoutsville Route 1, were released from Berger Hospital Sunday.

R. S. (Dick) Swenson, the county extension agent, is currently enjoying a vacation along with his wife and son.

Mrs. Roy J. Dalton, 59, of Millersport, mother of Jack Dalton, local agent here for the Norfolk and Western Railroad, is in serious condition in Lancaster-Fairfield Hospital. Mrs. Dalton suffered a fractured back in a fall down her basement steps.

Indiana Governor Imposes Martial Law In 2 Counties

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Gov. George N. Craig today imposed martial law on New Castle and Henry County, the former being the scene of last week's riot at the Perfect Circle Co.

The governor announced he is extending the area of martial law from the Perfect Circle plant in New Castle to neighboring plants in Hagerstown and Richmond.

"The history of this transaction does not justify one's trust in it," the governor told an emergency conference of Perfect Circle officials and the CIO-United Auto Workers.

The Perfect Circle company had told the governor it doesn't feel compelled to "negotiate with law-breakers."

Craig declared: "This order will continue so long as circumstances deem it advisable."

"The condition of martial law will be for the military establishment of Indiana to maintain law and order," the governor continued.

Joan Seymour Dies As Result Of Accident

Joan Seymour, 18, of near Kinnickinnick, who apparently leaped or fell from a moving automobile last week, died in University Hospital in Columbus Sunday as a result of the injuries she received.

The incident took place on Route 180 near Route 159, not far from Chillicothe, where she had been riding with a man identified as by the Ross County Sheriff's Department as Phillip Davis, of Stoutsville Route 1. Miss Seymour reportedly suffered a skull fracture when her head struck the pavement.

Miss Seymour was born Sept. 29, 1937 in Adelphi, a daughter of George and Mary Sheets Seymour. She was a student in the junior class of Centralia High School, where she was active in athletic activities, and was a 4-H Club member.

Surviving her are: her parents; three brothers—Larry and Danny at home, and SH-2 Roy Seymour, who is stationed with the U. S. Navy in Wickford, R. I.; and her maternal grandfather, Peter Sheets, of Circleville.

FUNERAL SERVICES will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Hill Funeral Home, Kingston. Burial will be in the Hallsville Cemetery.

Friends may call in the funeral home after Tuesday noon.

Utah Governor Admits Cause Is Losing One

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Gov. J. Bracken Lee admits that his crusade against federal income taxes is a losing one, but he hopes "to get enough attention focused on the case to make people wake up to the fact their constitutional rights have been trampled."

Meanwhile, Utah Democrats have called Lee's balk a "direct attack" on President Eisenhower and his foreign policy.

Lee, a Republican, said last week he would hold back payment of federal tax on his income over and above his gubernatorial salary of $10,000 a year in order to bring about a test case on the constitutionality of using tax money for foreign aid.

Tax is withheld on his gubernatorial salary. He said he made "over $1,000" from other sources.

The executive committee of the state Democratic party also asked that Lee resign or retract what it called his "avowed defiance" of the law. The governor said he had no intention of resigning or making a retraction.

Lee said he believed it unconstitutional for the government to "tax its citizens for the support of foreign nations."

Lee refused a demand of the Utah Democratic Party's Executive Committee to either resign or retract his statement.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

KENNETH MEADOWS

Kenneth Gordon Meadows died at 5:45 p. m. Saturday in General Hospital, Washington D. C.

Mr. Meadows, a TV mechanic, was born Jan. 5, 1916 in Ribolt, Ky., a son of A. A. and Elizabeth Meadows. He was a veteran of World War II, having served for three years in the South Pacific.

Surviving him are: his mother, who resides in Kingston; his wife, Margaret T. Meadows of Long Beach, N. J., whom he married in 1942; two daughters, Miss Bonalee Meadows of Circleville, and Miss JoAnn Meadows of Long Beach, N. J.; two sisters, Mrs. Mary Elder of Kingston and Mrs. Thelda Large of Toledo, and a brother, William A. Meadows of Kingston.

Funeral arrangements are being completed by the Hill Funeral Home of Kingston.

Robert Hoover Resigns Job As City Policeman

The second man within a week to announce his resignation from the Circleville Police Department turned in his badge today.

Robert Hoover, who was serving out his 90-day probationary period, quit the police force as of today. Police Chief Elmer Merriman accepted the resignation as the result of a letter written by Hoover.

Hoover said he intends going into the filling station business with a relative. He joined the police department approximately two months ago.

The only reason given for his resignation was that he could "make more money working better hours." Hoover worked the 11 p. m. to 7 a. m. tour of duty and his pay was $275 a month.

LAST WEEK, Officer Forrest Sowards sent in his resignation effective next Saturday. Sowards had been on the force since last December.

The department is now two men under its authorized strength. A civil service exam has been called for next Monday, Oct. 17, to provide an eligible list for more officers.

2 Ohio Solons Boom Lausche For President

COLUMBUS (AP) — Two Democratic members of the Ohio House, from Mahoning County, today urged Gov. Frank J. Lausche to become a candidate for President.

Reps. John J. Lynch, serving his fourth term in the House, and G. D. Tablack, serving his fifth, made the plea in a letter to the governor. It read:

"We have read with interest the several suggestions that you become a candidate for the Presidency of the United States for the Democratic convention in 1956 and to authorize the filing of a slate of delegates pledged to you in the primaries next year."

"We wish to join those who have urged your candidacy for President and to offer our support for this purpose."

Lausche has hinted without definitely stating that he might become Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for President. Such candidates must give written consent for delegate candidates pledged to them to seek election in the 1956 primaries. The deadline for filing is next Feb. 8.

A political writer for the staunch Republican Columbus Dispatch opined yesterday that Lausche would go as Ohio's favorite son, but that the governor would end up running for a sixth term. The Dispatch writer said Lausche would not consider an other political office. He has been mentioned as a possible opponent for U. S. Sen. George Bender.

Auto Accident Toll Here Rises; 9 Persons Hurt Over Weekend

Four county accidents over the weekend, resulting in nine persons being injured, were reported by the sheriff's department here. In addition, five Pickaway countians were hurt in a Fairfield County accident.

Richard Butler, 18, of Chillicothe Route 1, and a passenger in his car suffered minor lacerations in a one-car accident on the Circleville-Westfall Rd. south of Route 22. Butler was arrested by Sheriff Charles Radcliff for drunk driving and fined $100 and costs, sentenced to three consecutive days in jail and had his license suspended for six months by city court.

Charles E. Fellers, 86, of 445 E. Main St., was hurt when his car was reportedly forced off the road by an oncoming vehicle. The mishap took place on Route 104, one mile south of Route 316.

Fellers told Deputy Carl White an oncoming tractor caused him to take to the berm and his car went out of control. Fellers had lacerations of his hands.

ROBERT B. ROSS, 44, of Laurelville Route 2, reportedly slowed down to pick up a hitch-hiker on Route 180, 14 miles southeast of here, and was struck from the rear by another car.

Ross suffered a back injury, according to Deputy White. Donald L. Smith, 19, of Adelphi, driver of the second vehicle, had a lacerated forehead, as did his passenger, 15-year old James Smith.

Smith told Deputy White he rounded a curve and did not see the stopped vehicle until it was too late.

A car making a left turn off Route 23 near the Pickaway-Ross County line into a farm lane was struck from the rear. Robert L. Rice Jr., 36, of Mt. Sterling Route 1, told Deputy Dwight Radcliff he made an arm signal prior to the turn.

Paul W. Hamilton, 20, of 441 Watt St., driver of the second car, said he saw no signal. But Deputy Radcliff said one of Hamilton's passengers allegedly admitted seeing the signal.

HAMILTON SUFFERED an injury to his left leg. Roger Davis, 19, of Stoutsville, injured his nose. Phillip Brown, 18, of Circleville Route 4, hurt his left leg. All were in Hamilton's car.

The five persons injured in the Fairfield County accident, which happened north of Stoutsville, are all in "good" condition in Berger Hospital. They include: Mr. and Mrs. Francis Arnold, of Circleville Route 1; Mrs. Thomas Weaver, of Laurelville Route 1; Mrs. Dan Hinton, of Williamsport Route 1; and Mrs. Myrtle Puckett, of 157 Watt St.

Deputy White said he received a call on the accident but found it was in Fairfield County. He said it was a one-car accident.

Prayer Aids Parents In Hard Decision

LEWISTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Faced with a decision that meant either death or paralysis for their 12-year-old daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lee E. Elder believe they have found their answer in prayer.

Marjorie Lee Elder, their oldest daughter, will undergo a major brain operation in Philadelphia Children's Hospital within the next few days.

Mrs. Elder said she was told by physicians at the hospital that calcium was forming on a birthmark on the right side of Marjorie's brain and that the only way to save her life was through an operation which even if successful would paralyze parts of the girl's body.

"Her father and I prayed about it for a week and then we knew what we would have to do," Mrs. Elder said.

The Lewistown mother of two children Marjorie and Carol Dee, 9, said physicians told her that if Marjorie did not undergo surgery she may die at anytime.

And even if the operation were performed, Mrs. Elder said, physicians explained the chances of survival were marginal and by the nature of the operation Marjorie would lose the vision of her left eye and suffer paralysis of her left arm and leg.

But Marjorie said: "I'm not afraid. God will be with me. I just hope I get lots of cards. I would like to make a scrapbook of them but maybe no one will send me any."

Anne Lindbergh Examines the Problems of Middle Age

By ANNE MORROW LINDBERGH

(This is the fifth installment of one of the most discussed books of our time, Anne Morrow Lindbergh's best-seller "Gift from the Sea.")

BUT surely we do demand duration and continuity of relationships, at least of marriage. That is what marriage is, isn't it—continuity of a relationship? Of course, but not necessarily continuity in one single form or stage; not necessarily continuity in the double-sunrise stage. There are other shells to help me, to put in the row on my desk. Here is one I picked up yesterday. Not rare; there are many of them on the beach and yet each one is individual. You never find two alike. Each is fitted and formed by its own life and struggle to survive. It is an oyster, with small shells clinging to its humped back. Sprawling and uneven, it has the irregularity of something growing. It looks rather like the house of a big family, pushing out one addition after another to hold its teeming life—here a sleeping porch for the children, and there a veranda for the play-pen; here a garage for the extra car and there a shed for the bicycles. It amuses me because it seems so much like my life at the moment, like most women's lives in the middle years of marriage. It is untidy, spread out in all directions, heavily encrusted with accumulations and, in its living state—this one is empty and cast up by the sea—firmly imbedded on its rock.

Yes, I believe the oyster shell is a good one to express the middle years of marriage. It suggests the struggle of life itself. The oyster has fought to have that place on the rock to which it has fitted itself perfectly and to which it clings tenaciously. So most couples in the growing years of marriage struggle to achieve a place in the world. It is a physical and material battle first of all, for a home, for children, for a place in their particular society. In the midst of such a life there is not much time to sit facing one another over a breakfast table. In these years one recognizes the truth of Saint-Exupéry's line: "Love does not consist in gazing at each other (one perfect sunrise gazing at another!) but in looking outward together in the same direction." For, in fact, man and woman are not only looking outward in the same direction; they are working outward. (Observe the steady encroachment of the oyster bed over the rock.) Here one forms ties, roots, a firm base. (Try and pry an oyster from its ledge!) Here one makes oneself part of the community of men, of human society.

Here the bonds of marriage are formed. For marriage, which is always spoken of as a bond, becomes actually in this stage, many bonds, many strands, of different texture and strength, making up a web that is taut and firm. The web is fashioned of love. Yes, but many kinds of love: romantic love first, then a slow-growing devotion and, playing through these, a constantly rippling companionship. It is made of loyalties, and interdependencies, and shared experiences. It is woven of memories of meetings and conflicts; of triumphs and disappointments. It is a web of communication, a common language, and the acceptance of lack of language, too; a knowledge of likes and dislikes, of habits and reactions, both physical and mental. It is a web of instincts and intuitions, and known and unknown exchanges. The web of marriage is made by propinquity, in the day to day living side by side, looking outward and working outward in the same direction. It is woven in space and in time of the substance of life itself.

But the bond—the bond of romantic love is something else. It has so little to do with propinquity or habit or space or time or life itself. It leaps across all of them, like a rainbow—or a glance. It is the bond of romantic love which fastens the double-sunrise shell, only one bond, one hinge. And if that fragile link is snapped in the storm, what will hold the halves to each other? In the oyster stage of marriage, romantic love is only one of the many bonds that make up the intricate and enduring web that two people have built together.

I am very fond of the oyster shell. It is humble and awkward and ugly. It is slate-colored and unsymmetrical. Its form is not primarily beautiful but functional. I make fun of its knobiness. Sometimes I resent its burdens and excrescences. But its tireless adaptability and tenacity draw my astonished admiration and sometimes even my tears. And it is comfortable in its familiarity, its homeliness, like old garden gloves which have moulded themselves perfectly to the shape of the hand. I do not like to put it down. I will not want to leave it.

But is it the permanent symbol of marriage? Should it—any more than the double-sunrise shell—last forever? The tide of life recedes. The house, with its bulging sleeping porches and sheds, begins little by little to empty. The children go away to school and then to marriage and lives of their own. Most people by middle age have attained, or ceased to struggle to attain, their place in the world. That terrific tenacity to life, to place, to people, to material surroundings and accumulations—is it as necessary as it was when one was struggling for one's security or the security of one's children? Many of the physical struggles have ceased, due either to success or to failure. Does the shell need to be so welded to its rock? Married couples are apt to find themselves in middle age, high and dry in an outmoded shell, in a fortress which has outlived its function. What is one to do—die of atrophy in an outstripped form? Or move on to another form, other experiences?

Perhaps, someone will suggest, this is the moment to go back to the simple self-enclosed world of the sunrise shell? Alone at last again over the muffs and the marmalade! No, one cannot go back to that tightly closed world. One has grown too big, too many-sided, for that rigidly symmetrical shell. I am not sure that one has not grown too big for any shell at all.

Perhaps middle age is, or should be, a period of shedding shells; the shell of ambition, the shell of material accumulations and possessions, the shell of the ego. Perhaps one can shed at this stage in life as one sheds in beach-living; one's pride, one's false ambitions, one's mask, one's armor. Was that armor not put on to protect one from the competitive world? If one ceases to compete, does one need it? Perhaps one can at last in middle age, if not earlier, be completely oneself. And what a liberation that would be!

It is true that the adventures of youth are less open to us. Most of us cannot, at this point, start a new career or raise a new family. Many of the physical, material, and worldly ambitions are less attainable than they were twenty years ago. But is this not often a relief? "I no longer worry about being the belle of Newport," a beautiful woman, who had become a talented artist, once said to me. And I always liked that Virginia Woolf hero who meets middle age admitting: "Things have dropped from me. I have outlived certain desires. . . . I am not so gifted as at one time seemed likely. Certain things lie beyond my scope. I shall never understand the harder problems of philosophy. Rome is the limit of my traveling. . . . I shall never see savages in Tahiti spearing fish by the light of a blazing cresset, or a lion spring in the jungle, or a naked man eating raw flesh. . . ." (Thank God! you can hear him adding under his breath.)

The primitive, physical, functional pattern of the morning of life, the active years before forty or fifty, is outlived. But there is still the afternoon opening up, which one can spend not in the feverish pace of the morning but in having time at last for those intellectual, cultural, and spiritual activities that were pushed aside in the heat of the race. We Americans, with our terrific emphasis on youth, action, and material success, certainly tend to belittle the afternoon of life and even to pretend it never comes. We push the clock back and try to prolong the morning, overreaching and overstraining ourselves in the unnatural effort. We do not succeed, of course. We cannot compete with our sons and daughters. And what a struggle it is to race with these overactive and under-wise adults! In our breathless attempts we often miss the flowering that waits for afternoon.

For is it not possible that middle age can be looked upon as a period of second flowering, second growth, even a kind of second adolescence? It is true that society in general does not help one accept this interpretation of the second half of life. And therefore this period of expanding is often tragically misunderstood. Many people never climb above the plateau of forty-to-fifty. The signs that presage growth, so similar, it seems to me, to those in early adolescence: discontent, restlessness, doubt, despair, longing, are interpreted falsely as signs of decay. In youth one does not as often misinterpret the signs; one accepts them, quite rightly, as growing pains. One takes them seriously, listens to them, follows where they lead. One is afraid. Naturally. Who is not afraid of pure space—that breath-taking empty space of an open door? But despite fear, one goes through to the room beyond.

But in middle age, because of the false assumption that it is a period of decline, one interprets these life-signs, paradoxically, as signs of approaching death. Instead of facing them, one runs away; one escapes—into depressions, nervous breakdowns, drink, love affairs, or frantic, thoughtless, fruitless overwork. Anything, rather than face them. Anything, rather than stand still and learn from them. One tries to cure the signs of growth, to exorcise them, as if they were devils, when really they might be angels of annunciation.

Angels of annunciation of what? Of a new stage in living when, having shed many of the physical struggles, the worldly ambitions, the material encumbrances of active life, one might be free to fulfill the neglected side of one's self. One might be free for growth of mind, heart, and talent; free at last for spiritual growth; free of the clamping sunrise shell. Beautiful as it was, it was still a closed world one had to outgrow. And the time may come when—comfortable and adaptable as it is—one may outgrow even the oyster shell.

THERE ARE IN THE BEACH-WORLD certain rare creatures, the "Argonauta" (Paper Nautilus), who are not fastened to their shell at all. It is actually a cradle for the young, held in the arms of the mother argonaut who floats with it to the surface, where the eggs hatch and the young swim away. Then the mother argonaut leaves her shell and starts another life. I am fascinated by this image of the argonaut, whose temporary dwelling I have seen only as the treasure of a specialist's collection. Almost transparent, delicately fluted like a Greek column, this narcissus-white shell is feather light as some coracle of ancient times, ready to set sail across unknown seas. It was named, the book tells me, for the fabled ships of Jason that went in search of the Golden Fleece. Sailors consider these shells a sign of fair weather and favorable winds.

Lovely shell, lovely image—I am tempted to play with it in my mind. Is this the symbol for another stage in relationships? Can we middle-aged argonauts when we outgrow the oyster bed, look forward to the freedom of the nautilus who has left its shell for the open seas? But what does the open sea hold for us? We cannot believe that the second half of life promises "fair weather and favorable winds." What golden fleece is there for the middle-aged?

In speaking of the argonauts one might as well admit one has left the usual shell collections. A double-sunrise shell, an oyster bed—these are common knowledge to most of us. We recognize them; we know about them; they are part of our daily life and the lives of others around us. But with this rare and delicate vessel, we have left the well-tracked beaches of proven facts and experiences. We are adventuring in the chartless seas of imagination.

Is the golden fleece that awaits us some kind of new freedom for growth? And in this new freedom, is there any place for a relationship? I believe there is, after the oyster bed, an opportunity for the best relationship of all: not a limited, mutually exclusive one, like the sunrise shell; and not a functional, dependent one, as in the oyster bed; but the meeting of two whole fully developed people as persons. It would be, to borrow a definition of the Scottish philosopher, MacMurray, a fully personal relationship, that is, "a type of relationship into which people enter as persons with the whole of themselves." "Personal relationships," he goes on to explain, ". . . have no ulterior motive. They are not based on particular interests. They do not serve partial and limited ends. Their value lies entirely in themselves and for the same reason transcends all other values. And that is because they are relations of persons as persons." This relationship of "persons as persons" was prophetically hinted at by the German poet, Rilke, almost fifty years ago. He foresaw a great change in the relationships between men and women, which he hoped in the future would no longer follow the traditional patterns of submission and domination or of possession and competition. He described a state in which there would be space and freedom for growth, and in which each partner would be the means of releasing the other. "A relation," he concludes, "that is meant to be of one human being to another. . . . And this more human love (that will fulfill itself, infinitely considerate and gentle, and good and clear in binding and releasing) will resemble that which we are with struggle and endeavor preparing, the love that consists in this, that two solitudes protect and touch and greet each other."

But this new relationship of persons as persons, this more human love, this two solitudes conception is not something that comes easily. It must have grown, like all firm-rooted growth, slowly. It perhaps can only follow a long development in the history of human civilization and individually in each human being's life. Such a stage in life, it would seem to me, must come not as a gift or a lucky accident, but as part of an evolutionary process, an achievement which could only follow certain important developments in each partner.

It cannot be reached until woman—individually and as a sex—has herself come of age, a maturing process we are witnessing today. In this undertaking she must work alone and cannot count on much help from the outsider, eager as he may be in pointing out the way. There are many signs of interest in the new woman today, chiefly in the form of mechanistic studies of her as a female animal. Of course it is necessary and helpful for woman to understand and accept her sexual needs and habits but it is only one side of a very complex problem. One cannot expect statistics on her physical reactions to add much knowledge or nourishment to her inner life, to her basic relation to herself, or to her long postponed hope and right, as a human being, to be creative in other ways besides the purely physical one.

America's Famous Best Seller "GIFT FROM THE SEA"

Anne Lindbergh Examines the Problems of Middle Age

By ANNE MORROW LINDBERGH

(This is the fifth installment of one of the most discussed books of our time, Anne Morrow Lindbergh's best-seller "Gift from the Sea.")

BUT surely we do demand duration and continuity of relationships, at least of marriage. That is what marriage is, isn't it—continuity of a relationship? Of course, but not necessarily continuity in one single form or stage; not necessarily continuity in the double-sunrise stage. There are other shells to help me, to put in the row on my desk. Here is one I picked up yesterday. Not rare; there are many of them on the beach and yet each one is individual. You never find two alike. Each is fitted and formed by its own life and struggle to survive. It is an oyster, with small shells clinging to its humped back. Sprawling and uneven, it has the irregularity of something growing. It looks rather like the house of a big family, pushing out one addition after another to hold its teeming life—here a sleeping porch for the children, and there a veranda for the play-pen; here a garage for the extra car and there a shed for the bicycles. It amuses me because it seems so much like my life at the moment, like most women's lives in the middle years of marriage. It is untidy, spread out in all directions, heavily encrusted with accumulations and, in its living state—this one is empty and cast up by the sea—firmly imbedded on its rock.

Yes, I believe the oyster shell is a good one to express the middle years of marriage. It suggests the struggle of life itself. The oyster has fought to have that place on the rock to which it has fitted itself perfectly and to which it clings tenaciously. So most couples in the growing years of marriage struggle to achieve a place in the world. It is a physical and material battle first of all, for a home, for children, for a place in their particular society. In the midst of such a life there is not much time to sit facing one another over a breakfast table. In these years one recognizes the truth of Saint-Exupéry's line: "Love does not consist in gazing at each other (one perfect sunrise gazing at another!) but in looking outward together in the same direction." For, in fact, man and woman are not only looking outward in the same direction; they are working outward. (Observe the steady encroachment of the oyster bed over the rock.) Here one forms ties, roots, a firm base. (Try and pry an oyster from its ledge!) Here one makes oneself part of the community of men, of human society.

Here the bonds of marriage are formed. For marriage, which is always spoken of as a bond, becomes actually in this stage, many bonds, many strands, of different texture and strength, making up a web that is taut and firm. The web is fashioned of love. Yes, but many kinds of love: romantic love first, then a slow-growing devotion and, playing through these, a constantly rippling companionship. It is made of loyalties, and interdependencies, and shared experiences. It is woven of memories of meetings and conflicts; of triumphs and disappointments. It is a web of communication, a common language, and the acceptance of lack of language, too; a knowledge of likes and dislikes, of habits and reactions, both physical and mental. It is a web of instincts and intuitions, and known and unknown exchanges. The web of marriage is made by propinquity, in the day to day living side by side, looking outward and working outward in the same direction. It is woven in space and in time of the substance of life itself.

But the bond—the bond of romantic love is something else. It has so little to do with propinquity or habit or space or time or life itself. It leaps across all of them, like a rainbow—or a glance. It is the bond of romantic love which fastens the double-sunrise shell, only one bond, one hinge. And if that fragile link is snapped in the storm, what will hold the halves to each other? In the oyster stage of marriage, romantic love is only one of the many bonds that make up the intricate and enduring web that two people have built together.

I am very fond of the oyster shell. It is humble and awkward and ugly. It is slate-colored and unsymmetrical. Its form is not primarily beautiful but functional. I make fun of its knobiness. Sometimes I resent its burdens and excrescences. But its tireless adaptability and tenacity draw my astonished admiration and sometimes even my tears. And it is comfortable in its familiarity, its homeliness, like old garden gloves which have moulded themselves perfectly to the shape of the hand. I do not like to put it down. I will not want to leave it.

But is it the permanent symbol of marriage? Should it—any more than the double-sunrise shell—last forever? The tide of life recedes. The house, with its bulging sleeping porches and sheds, begins little by little to empty. The children go away to school and then to marriage and lives of their own. Most people by middle age have attained, or ceased to struggle to attain, their place in the world. That terrific tenacity to life, to place, to people, to material surroundings and accumulations—is it as necessary as it was when one was struggling for one's security or the security of one's children? Many of the physical struggles have ceased, due either to success or to failure. Does the shell need to be so welded to its rock? Married couples are apt to find themselves in middle age, high and dry in an outmoded shell, in a fortress which has outlived its function. What is one to do—die of atrophy in an outstripped form? Or move on to another form, other experiences?

Perhaps, someone will suggest, this is the moment to go back to the simple self-enclosed world of the sunrise shell? Alone at last again over the muffs and the marmalade! No, one cannot go back to that tightly closed world. One has grown too big, too many-sided, for that rigidly symmetrical shell. I am not sure that one has not grown too big for any shell at all.

Perhaps middle age is, or should be, a period of shedding shells; the shell of ambition, the shell of material accumulations and possessions, the shell of the ego. Perhaps one can shed at this stage in life as one sheds in beach-living; one's pride, one's false ambitions, one's mask, one's armor. Was that armor not put on to protect one from the competitive world? If one ceases to compete, does one need it? Perhaps one can at last in middle age, if not earlier, be completely oneself. And what a liberation that would be!

It is true that the adventures of youth are less open to us. Most of us cannot, at this point, start a new career or raise a new family. Many of the physical, material, and worldly ambitions are less attainable than they were twenty years ago. But is this not often a relief? "I no longer worry about being the belle of Newport," a beautiful woman, who had become a talented artist, once said to me. And I always liked that Virginia Woolf hero who meets middle age admitting: "Things have dropped from me. I have outlived certain desires . . . I am not so gifted as at one time seemed likely. Certain things lie beyond my scope. I shall never understand the harder problems of philosophy. Rome is the limit of my traveling . . . I shall never see savages in Tahiti spearing fish by the light of a blazing cresset, or a lion spring in the jungle, or a naked man eating raw flesh . . ." (Thank God! you can hear him adding under his breath.)

The primitive, physical, functional pattern of the morning of life, the active years before forty or fifty, is outlived. But there is still the afternoon opening up, which one can spend not in the feverish pace of the morning but in having time at last for those intellectual, cultural, and spiritual activities that were pushed aside in the heat of the race. ## Two Religious Struggles Figured In Story Of America's Discovery

Two religious wars, 38 years apart in the 15th Century, played an important role in setting the stage for the voyage of Christopher Columbus and his discovery of America.

Historical researchers of the local branch of the Daughters of the American Revolution reviewed many of the lesser known details of the story here today in urging local observance of the anniversary. Wednesday is Columbus Day.

Two great struggles, the DAR pointed out, proved to be factors that worked toward America's discovery. One struggle came in 1453 and the other in 1491. One raged in the East, and the other in the West.

In one, Turkish Mohammedans were victorious. And in the other, Christian forces won.

THE narrative compiled by the DAR follows:

When Constantinople was captured by the Turks in 1453—the last remaining European stronghold in the far East—this closed the gate to all communication with Asia. This was the gateway of the Crusades, that is, the Christians advancing against the infidels who held the Tomb of Christ.

Turkish control of Constantinople cut off all trading from the eastern Mediterranean and with the Black Sea, where European merchants had traded for centuries.

As a result, ships of Italy and other countries remained idle. There was a great demand for silks and other luxuries and especially for spices for flavoring, but more important to prevent the spoilage of meat.

Many winds were searching for the solution. How to reach India and China and avoid the Turks. Sailors had already gone as far South as the Cape of Good Hope and they had long known about the Azores and other islands, but they believed beyond them lay Perdition.

It is well known that the scholars of that day believed the earth was round. Columbus, who had been a student in the universities and a sailor as well, held that theory. He spent a great deal of his time with maps and charts, and he finally concluded that by sailing West he could reach India and China.

He convinced the King of Portugal, but the monarch was afraid to back Columbus. He sent him to Spain to King Ferdinand. Queen Isabella readily believed him and promised to pawn her jewels, if necessary, to raise funds for the trip. She made it possible for him to live at her court and interest others in the idea.

BUT THE time and money of these Spanish rulers was taken up with something of far greater importance to them at that time. They were in a war to drive the Mohammedans out of Spain. These were the same kind of infidels that had plagued the Christian world for centuries, and had recently driven them out of the Mediterranean ports.

Time passed, and Columbus remained around the court, biding his time and interesting the king's advisors. The fall of Granada in 1491 made it possible for Ferdinand to carry out his promise of help to Columbus, but the Spanish cabinet and advisors still voted down the idea as visionary and impractical. And Columbus left the court—the picture of dejection.

Meanwhile, the king's advisors on religion had drawn an attractive picture for the royal couple, of the great multitude of people in that far-off land that could be brought to the kingdom of God, and of all the trade and treasures from the possession of India.

The great decision was changed.

Columbus was overtaken and returned to court. Plans went forward rapidly for his journey. Enlisting men for such a journey was all but impossible. Release from jail was offered as a reward for joining the expedition and bounties were tried. Finally, Ferdinand commandeered both ships and men, and the world-changing crews set sail from Palos, Spain, August 3, 1492, in three small ships.

Although they didn't know it, they were en route to America.

COLUMBUS made three trips to the new continent, but eventually fell out of favor and died in poverty. But his epoch-making journey made Spain a rich nation before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock.

Strangely enough the discovery of America was made possible from the outcome of two religious wars, in a day when religion was foremost in the minds of men.

Two Religious Struggles Figured In Story Of America's Discovery

Two religious wars, 38 years apart in the 15th Century, played an important role in setting the stage for the voyage of Christopher Columbus and his discovery of America.

Historical researchers of the local branch of the Daughters of the American Revolution reviewed many of the lesser known details of the story here today in urging local observance of the anniversary. Wednesday is Columbus Day.

Two great struggles, the DAR pointed out, proved to be factors that worked toward America's discovery. One struggle came in 1453 and the other in 1491. One raged in the East, and the other in the West.

In one, Turkish Mohammedans were victorious. And in the other, Christian forces won.

THE narrative compiled by the DAR follows:

When Constantinople was captured by the Turks in 1453—the last remaining European stronghold in the far East—this closed the gate to all communication with Asia. This was the gateway of the Crusades, that is, the Christians advancing against the infidels who held the Tomb of Christ.

Turkish control of Constantinople cut off all trading from the eastern Mediterranean and with the Black Sea, where European merchants had traded for centuries.

As a result, ships of Italy and other countries remained idle. There was a great demand for silks and other luxuries and especially for spices for flavoring, but more important to prevent the spoilage of meat.

Many winds were searching for the solution. How to reach India and China and avoid the Turks. Sailors had already gone as far South as the Cape of Good Hope and they had long known about the Azores and other islands, but they believed beyond them lay Perdition.

It is well known that the scholars of that day believed the earth was round. Columbus, who had been a student in the universities and a sailor as well, held that theory. He spent a great deal of his time with maps and charts, and he finally concluded that by sailing West he could reach India and China.

He convinced the King of Portugal, but the monarch was afraid to back Columbus. He sent him to Spain to King Ferdinand. Queen Isabella readily believed him and promised to pawn her jewels, if necessary, to raise funds for the trip. She made it possible for him to live at her court and interest others in the idea.

BUT THE time and money of these Spanish rulers was taken up with something of far greater importance to them at that time. They were in a war to drive the Mohammedans out of Spain. These were the same kind of infidels that had plagued the Christian world for centuries, and had recently driven them out of the Mediterranean ports.

Time passed, and Columbus remained around the court, biding his time and interesting the king's advisors. The fall of Granada in 1491 made it possible for Ferdinand to carry out his promise of help to Columbus, but the Spanish cabinet and advisors still voted down the idea as visionary and impractical. And Columbus left the court—the picture of dejection.

Meanwhile, the king's advisors on religion had drawn an attractive picture for the royal couple, of the great multitude of people in that far-off land that could be brought to the kingdom of God, and of all the trade and treasures from the possession of India.

The great decision was changed!

Columbus was overtaken and returned to court. Plans went forward rapidly for his journey. Enlisting men for such a journey was all but impossible. Release from jail was offered as a reward for joining the expedition and bounties were tried. Finally, Ferdinand commandeered both ships and men, and the world-changing crews set sail from Palos, Spain, August 3, 1492, in three small ships.

Although they didn't know it, they were en route to America.

COLUMBUS made three trips to the new continent, but eventually fell out of favor and died in poverty. But his epoch-making journey made Spain a rich nation before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock.

Strangely enough the discovery of America was made possible from the outcome of two religious wars, in a day when religion was foremost in the minds of men.

Ohio Kiwanians Holding Confab

DAYTON (AP)—Dr. D. Elton Trueblood, director of religious policy for the U. S. Information Agency, will speak at the 38th annual district convention of Ohio Kiwanians here today.

The convention opened yesterday and continues through Wednesday with 2,000 delegates expected. The governor's dinner is scheduled for tonight.

Dr. Russell J. Humbert, DePaul University president, told the Kiwanians last night that America's backbone is its freedom of worship, belief and way of life.

Locksmith Forced To Pick Own Lock

ATLANTA (AP)—A locksmith went to work early today so he could pick the lock on the door of his store. Loy Lee, who has been a locksmith 30 years, said he installed a fine old oak door and a 50-year-old lock on his store Saturday. But when he got home he discovered he'd left the keys to the lock inside the store.

"Mary Haworth's Mail"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife and I have been married for 12 years and were reasonably happy together until three years ago. We went to the same college, have similar interests and had known each other for several years before we married.

Our only child, a daughter, was born four years ago in Europe, where we were then stationed with the Army. We were very happy about this precious little girl and hoped to have other children eventually.

When Dina was a year old we returned to this country, and visited my mother-in-law enroute to our new station, nearby her home. From then on, she insisted we shouldn't have more children. She argued that having more children would reduce our ability to give Dina her due. If my wife hadn't yielded to her point, I should have attempted at interference and we might have had more children. But as it is, our marriage means nothing now.

No Hope For Future
Our conjugal relationship has lapsed almost entirely due to this preposterous situation. If it weren't for my love of Dina I would have got a divorce some time ago. I have long realized that Mrs. X is a domineering person who controls my wife like a puppet when near her. But until the last three years, we lived so far away that her bossy striving lost much of its impact, slowed down by the mails.

I have been trying for a year to decide what would be best for Dina—to grow up with parents who aren't happy together, or with parents who are divorced. Her welfare must come first. If we divorce, I should like to keep Dina, but I realize there's not much chance of a father getting custody of a small child.

I haven't mentioned divorce to Ann (my wife) though we've had several arguments over our difficulties. There is no other woman or other man involved. I don't see how our marriage can be happy again after what has happened. Mrs. X has destroyed everything a marriage should stand for.

E.P.
DEAR E. P.: I get the impression that you are passing the buck (or trying to), when you hold Mrs. X entirely to blame for the unhappy state of your marriage. But it is my guess that she simply lipped in officiously, as a busy-body, in a relationship already manifestly in need of deep help, on your return from Europe three years ago. So I wonder, what was wrong then between you and your wife?

We may take it as a fact that your wife wouldn't have carried out her mother's dictate, to limit the family to one child, if the idea, or the interference, were offensive to Ann. Even the most mother-bossed daughter isn't so biddable as to obey mama in matters so intimate, once she gets a congenial man of her own. Thus I infer that Ann, for reasons of her own, didn't want any more children of the marriage—and that Mrs. X was boldly fronting for Ann, in "arguing" you into conformity.

The inside story may be that Ann is a pathetically immature character, conditioned to be somebody's echo in her basic relationships—and unconsciously appalled by the implicit obligations of motherhood. Also perhaps she found you more intimidating than mama, comparatively, in that you expected her to be your solace, whereas mama treated her as a child. And thus she yearned for mama's supervisory championship, when living with you out of mama's reach, and was greatly relieved to get back to mama's arms, and take refuge in mama's skirts.

Lacks Real Love
In your letter, here condensed, you say that your business is making decisions that may affect the lives of many. In short you are an Army officer, with a duty to be autocratic; and possibly by temperament and training a crushingly difficult spouse, from a timid wife's angle. Perhaps you aren't sympathetic, communicative and receptive regarding a difference in outlook; and maybe you didn't know how "dead" the marriage was, from your wife's view, by the time you returned here.

You don't write as one who has ever felt real love for his wife. Rather it seems you've valued her docility, obedience, etc. And if she obeys another ahead of you, you are thorough—that's your stand. Perhaps you come of a loveless family background, which may explain your acute concern to make Dina's welfare your first consideration, in dealing with the martial problem. Maybe you are hoping to spare Dina the psychological handicaps you inherited.

To sum up, Mrs. X hasn't destroyed your marriage. The fact is, you have a sick relationship with Ann—and your utter failure to touch on the inner meaning of the problem indicates that your emotional ignorance is a sizeable contributing factor. All things considered, my advice is to get psychiatric help in taking inventory

As Mother Takes Nip Boy Strolls

CINCINNATI (AP)—What's a 3-year-old supposed to do while his mother is drinking in a tavern? Police said that was the problem facing Steven Michael Ratliff Saturday while his mother, Mrs. Ethel Lewis, 18, visited an inn at Ludlow, Ky.

Police gave this account: Steven was told to stay in an automobile parked at the tavern's lot. But he was curious and started to wander about. A taxicab driver found the boy in the street at 4 a.m. and returned him to his mother.

Again Steven was parked in the car. But again Steven decided to take a walk. Three middle-aged persons saw him bobbing about and took him into the cafe.

"He held out his arms to me and said 'Mama,' so the people brought him to our table," said

Mrs. Lucille Lee, 27-year-old childless divorcee.

She said she took him home "because he was crying and I felt sorry for him."

"The bar was crowded with men and women, but no one turned around or said he was theirs, so I held him," Mrs. Lee said. "The bartender told us we couldn't keep a baby there. We left with him."

The mother reported to police the child was missing. But police booked her for drunkenness and gross child neglect. She was convicted on the drunkenness charge and is being held in Covington, Ky., jail today under $2,500 bond for grand jury action on the gross neglect allegation.

Mrs. Lee kept the boy overnight

IMPORTANT Medical Facts For Every Man Who Has Passed His 40th Birthday Men, Too, Go Thru "Change of Life"

DOCTORS CALL IT "MALE CLIMACTERIC"

New Safe Discovery Compounded For Counteracting Effect on Body and Blood Changes Due To Usual Deficiencies That Often Occur During Middle Age.

Doctors, employers and scientists all agree that after the first 40 years, the human body undergoes important normal changes. This change occurs in MEN as well as WOMEN! Men, if you are over 40, in good health... but feel nervous, physically weak in legs, back and arms, can't sleep, find it difficult to make decisions... are quick-tempered, always tired and suffer from that terrible "what's the use" feeling... chances are you are going through "change of life," or as doctors call it, MALE CLIMACTERIC. And at this time it's more important than ever that your system isn't deficient in the very vitamins and minerals nature created to counteract and offset the distressing symptoms of these "after 40" body and blood changes. Amazing new power-packed capsules called AFTER 40 CAPSULES, have been created especially for men and women over forty... each hospital recognized ingredient carefully chosen and carefully compounded for its benefit on every man and woman.

...Yes, one potent AFTER 40 CAPSULE daily feeds your system a special and particular combination of Vitamins and Minerals to supply your blood, body organs, glands and nerves, including blood-building red Vitamin B-12, the vitamin Germ of Wheat E, stimulating B-1, Iron, Calcium, Phosphorus, Iodine and other potent Vitamins and Minerals. Don't be deprived of life's pleasures by these nutritional deficiencies when science has given you a second chance to recharge body and blood this new easy way.

Amazing New "Health in a Capsule" Discovery You've Long Heard Was Coming. Every Ingredient Works Immediately To Help Strengthen Body and Blood.

Just recently a well-known scientist perfected AFTER 40 CAPSULES. He combined a group of THE RECOGNIZED VITAMINS AND MINERALS most often needed by men after 40. Common sense, and your doctor... will tell you vital organs often require the supplement of different vitamins and minerals in different amounts of maturity than they do during younger years. Amazing AFTER 40 CAPSULES were created specifically to provide a rich source of these essentials, needed by mature men and women. ORDER TODAY!

Don't Surrender to Old Age Until You've Made This Test

WHAT IS CLIMACTERIC?
Medical dictionaries tell us "climacteric" is the time of life when the body undergoes a radical change. The first change, when boys become men and girls become women, is usually between the ages of 12-17—another change again occurs usually between 40 and 50.

WHO DOES IT AFFECT?
Both men and women. In women it is called "menopause" or "Change of Life". In men, doctors call it "male climacteric."

WHAT ARE THE COMMON SYMPTOMS?
Because the body and blood are undergoing important changes during climacteric, the entire system may become upset and symptoms are varied. Men are usually extremely nervous, tire easily, become irritable, feel weak in arms, legs and back and often are very "crabby." Often there are "hot flashes" accompanied by that "what's the use" feeling. And very often a special supplementary source of certain vitamins and minerals is needed such as you find in this important discovery called AFTER 40 CAPSULES.

WHAT CAN BE DONE?
Medical science has discovered many medicines that end tide you over the difficult "change of life" period. Today, try the new capsule called "AFTER 40" that supplies the body with an unusual combination of vitamins and minerals so often needed during this period. Full month's supply only $5.00... be absolutely delighted with results or cheerful, unquestioned refund.

PREVENTING FIRES

THIS IS National Fire Prevention Week. It should be observed with more diligence than is usually accorded special days and weeks. Its object is to protect life and property against needless waste.

The date is fixed by the season. The weather calls for kindling fires in stoves, furnaces and fireplaces that may not have been used since last spring. Are these heating outfits in condition? Take a look at them. Have experienced persons look at them, those who know what to look for.

Frequently such examinations reveal that pipes have been rusted through and may permit sparks and even flames to come in contact with inflammable material.

Rural districts are heavy fire sufferers every year. It is reported that approximately 35,000 farm buildings go up in smoke annually. That figures out at about one building lost every 15 minutes. That is bad enough, but in these fires more than 3,500 persons lose their lives.

Some rural districts are organizing and getting fire protection by the use of equipment from municipal fire departments. Such hookups should be extended wherever feasible.

WINTERFYLLETH

THERE IS none to say ill of October, wherein all the months smile and bow. October is a blend of the gentle and balmy wind that is March at its best and the first harbinger of spring; the velvet greenery of meadow that is the lush grass of summer just before its ripening; the gold and scarlet that is the royal color pageant of autumn; then the hoar-frost that is the very mantle of winter itself.

October is the eighth month of the old Roman year, which began in March. In the Julian calendar, while retaining its old name, it became the tenth month, and had 31 days assigned to it.

By the Slavs, October is called the "yellow month," from the fading of the leaf. To the Anglo-Saxons it was known as Winterfylleth, because at this full moon "fylleth" winter was supposed to begin.

By whatever name, October is the realization of nature's promise of seedtime and harvest, a time of rich and heady beauty. It is a hearty and hale month.

These Days

What Egypt has done is quite simple. Not finding it possible to obtain arms at reasonable terms for speedy delivery from the United States, Premier Nasser got what he needed through Soviet Russia. The deal was made in August.

It is not believable that the United States or Great Britain knew nothing about the deal until deliveries were ready. The general claim to ignorance can only mean that the existing intelligence organizations of both countries are totally incompetent and require overhauling. In the United States, this has been recommended by the Hoover Commission.

There can be no question but that Egypt, a sovereign state, has a right to purchase arms where it chooses and under whatever conditions are available to it. The suppliers are bound by no international agreements not to sell to Egypt or any other country.

What is involved here is altogether another principle. The Geneva Conference, at the Summit, was called for the purpose of establishing a recognized status quo based on a balance of power. This Balance of Power differs from that of the Holy Alliance (1815) in that it is not limited to Europe; it is world-wide.

The American people have never seen a map describing the Balance of Power established at Geneva; as the Russians smiled so smugly, it undoubtedly included China as part of the Soviet Universal State.

The Western group of nations would claim the Arab world and Israel, both of which are really neutral, as part of the so-called Western free nations. Among these countries is Egypt. None of the countries involved in this formula, except four, were present at Geneva or had a voice in the description of their position in the world.

A balance of power based on a rigid status quo can only be maintained if neither side engages in activities which remove any segment of the arrangement which immediately produces an imbalance. When such an arrangement is held together by a fine hair, it is too much to expect that it can be held together at all for any prolonged period. At any rate, this one did not hold for a month, whereas the arrangements made at the Congress of Vienna survived more or less for 99 years (1815-1914).

Egypt's role in all this is that Premier Nasser wants weapons to destroy Israel, which has thus far successfully challenged Egypt's preeminence in the Near East. In each armed encounter, Israel has won the day. Egypt, which seeks to dominate the Moslem fraternity of nations, loses face each time it comes in conflict with Israel because the Jews are more competent fighters and possess better arms. Egypt assumed that the purchase of superior arms could help in the struggle against Israel.

The conquest of Israel by Egypt would seriously upset the status quo in the Near (Continued on Page Eight)

For Rent—A Mosquito

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — If you ever want to rent a mosquito—and, pray tell, who doesn't—Lorraine D'Essen is just the young lady for you.

Mrs. D'Essen, a comely, hazel-eyed woman in her early 30s, has one of the oddest jobs in this oddest of all possible worlds. She is an animal talent scout.

In three years she has built up a $100,000-a-year business finding specially trained animals for the movies, television programs, advertising agencies and industrial firms.

Her casting bureau for animal actors now can draw on 750 furred or feathered creatures ranging in size from a sneering mouse to a dancing elephant.

"So far I haven't had a call for a tight-rope-walking trained whale," mused Mrs. D'Essen, "and, frankly, I'd just as soon I never do."

If she does get such a call, she might rise to the emergency. Her failures are few.

One example of the crises that arise almost daily in her unusual career: A studio sent a hurry-up call for a mosquito—in the middle of February.

"I finally located one in Florida, and had it flown here," recalled Mrs. D'Essen.

"The mosquito had had no special training, but proved a great natural talent. The scene called for a close-up of him biting a man's hand. He went through his role as if he had spent his life before a camera. The scene didn't require a single retake."

For this one performance the studio paid $100, making the mosquito perhaps the highest paid insect in history.

"What did we do with him?" said Mrs. D'Essen. "We turned him loose in the studio. I didn't feel like swatting him. Who wants to swat a $100-a-day performer?"

Her animal actors average $100 an appearance, whether it is for a moment, an hour, or a full day. Elephants, whose upkeep is more expensive, get the top rate—$750.

Mrs. D'Essen rents some of the animals from other trainers, keeps many of her own on a 37-acre farm at Gillette, N. J.

They often remain overnight in her four-story old brick home in Greenwich Village.

"We have an animal United Nations there," she said. "Right now we are keeping an American crow, a llama from Peru (he is named Lucky and has a girl friend named Linda), an English sheep dog, two Great danes, a wombat named 'Mr. Wimpole' from Australia, a Siamese cat, and a Yorkshire Terrier called 'T. S. Eliot.'"

"All of them are real characters. Each animal has his own personality. If you take the trouble to understand his personality, then he usually will take the trouble to understand yours."

Her current favorite is the bird, known as "Ole Crow," who makes one of the fastest livings of anything in feathers for a firm that makes a well known Kentucky beverage.

"Ole" (pronounced "Oh-Lee") is the member of a crow family that has spent four generations in captivity," said Mrs. D'Essen. "He has a vocabulary of 14 words and can meow like a cat."

"He has been given an honorary college degree, owns a 36x36 inch Texas ranch, is an actual stockholder in a distillery, and loves to go to cocktail parties."

"Ole" won't eat crow for anybody. But he does love to dine on baked chicken, apple pie and ice cream and cheese cake. At cocktail functions he is limited to an aperitif consisting of two drops of bourbon in water.

"If he takes three drops, he gets higher than an eagle," observed Mrs. D'Essen.

She has one tip to people who want to get along with dogs. "Never pat them on the skull," she said. "A dog hates this worse than you do a stranger who suddenly slaps you on the back."

"As a matter of fact you should never try to pet a dog until he comes up to you first."

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX
ADAM and Ann ate dinner at the Alvarado; Adam bought Ann a Kathina; she held it in her two hands as they started the drive back to Santa Fe. Beyond Bernallillo all sorts of trailers lined the road; Indians had encamped on every available flat space. It was again Fiesta week in Santa Fe; only the mountains rose serene above the hubbub on the road. Ann smoothed the feathers on the little doll's head. "I'm glad we live in the canyon," she said softly, "and don't have to go into town."

"I'm glad," drawled Adam, "to have a house anywhere this week end."

She laughed. "We even have an extra bedroom."

"And company to put into it," said Adam pointing to a car that stood in their drive. "Wonder who?"

With mounting curiosity he drove on up the hill, and they got out. Two men and a woman came around the corner of the bedroom wing. One of men was Captain Carmichael. He greeted the Lairds exuberantly, then introduced his friend, an Air Force procurement officer, named Whiteside—Walt—and his wife, Winifred.

"They want to buy your house," said the captain without preface.

Ann laughed, and the other four people looked at her.

"You must be really desperate for a room!" . . . she explained.

That wasn't it—the Whitesides had come to New Mexico on the same job as the Carmichaels. He'd shown them his house, and they were envious. By then, Adam, still eyeing Ann, had led them indoors and they were looking about. He mentioned that the "office" had originally been meant for a ski room.

Major Whiteside squabbled amiably with Captain Carmichael over the respective merits of what each man was already calling "his house." Adam went off to make drinks; his eyes brightly blue, alertly interested; he watched Ann and listened to her.

He brought his tray into the living room in time to hear her say calmly that, yes, they might sell this house. The Lairds' plans, she went on with pretty dignity, were a little uncertain just now. Adam might work on a job in California—or they might go back to their home in Missouri.

She smiled. "Or we may stay right here and live at La Fonda or someplace."

"Not during Fiesta week!" cried Adam in alarm.

Everyone laughed. "Oh, no," said Ann, "just until you could build us another house."

Their callers finally departed, promising to return. Ann and Adam sat on in the darkening living room, watching the sunset. "Do you think," asked Ann dreamily, "that Indians get their ideas and colors for their serapes from the gorgeous sunsets we have out here?"

"We?" asked Adam, his voice odd.

She turned her head to look at him.

"That doesn't sound much like a move either to California or back to Missouri."

She smiled.

"But still you did just about sell our house over my head."

"Your defenseless head," he corrected.

Ann's chin tilted. "We stand likely to make a big profit."

"Great dog!" laughed Adam. "All the girl thinks about is money."

She giggled. "He asked me to set a price, and I put it so high I thought that would end matters. But I suppose these specialists get paid so much—"

"They do that, and they handle such tremendous amounts for the government that your suggestion sounded like peanuts."

"Oh, dear!"

"It's all right. That kind of profit will make camping out a pleasure. What kind of commission will you ask? Wait! I know. I'll buy you one of those dresses at that shop. The kind you said cost too much when I mentioned it before."

She opened her lips to retort caustically that he couldn't buy the dress he'd mentioned then, because—

—She closed her mouth again, biting down on her underlip. "I'd love a dress, Adam," she said softly. "Or an Indian shawl, maybe. I've always wanted one of those. A black one, with red roes—they cost more than the Fiesta dress, of course."

By then, Adam had remembered that he had given "Ann's dress" to Pinky. And for the first time he knew that Ann knew, and had said nothing.

Let The Doctor Decide

By MERVIN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ARE you confused about anti-histaminic drugs? Which one will do this, which will do that and which will do just about everything?

Well, with all the talk about anti-histaminic these days, I don't blame you. So, before you dash out to buy this or that drug, let me give you a few words of caution.

Histamine, you see, is a chemical which is normally present in your body. In some persons, it is the factor involved in allergic conditions such as hay fever, hives and other sensitivities.

Chemical Reaction

An anti-histaminic drug, then, is a compound designed to combat this chemical reaction in your body which may make you more sensitive than others to specific conditions.

These drugs have a useful place in curing certain conditions if properly handled under competent medical supervision.

Since many of them produce side effects in certain individuals, they can cause injury in various ways. Side effects such as nausea, headaches, vomiting, drowsiness and poor coordination, for example, can make it unsafe for you to drive a car.

Barbiturates and antibiotics must also be handled very carefully.

Occasionally, it becomes necessary for a doctor to prescribe a sedative, but you all know that sleeping pills and powders can be very harmful if they become a habit. When your body and mind are functioning normally, you have no need for drugs to make you sleep.

As for the antibiotics, there are many of them, all working differently in various conditions. Because they produce different reactions, it's of the utmost importance that they be administered and supervised by the individual's physician.

Flamboyant advertising on drugs is a signal to be cautious. And be especially suspicious of anything presented as a "cure-all."

Ann's chin tilted. "We stand likely to make a big profit."

"Great dog!" laughed Adam. "All the girl thinks about is money."

She giggled. "He asked me to set a price, and I put it so high I thought that would end matters. But I suppose these specialists get paid so much—"

"They do that, and they handle such tremendous amounts for the government that your suggestion sounded like peanuts."

"Oh, dear!"

"It's all right. That kind of profit will make camping out a pleasure. What kind of commission will you ask? Wait! I know. I'll buy you one of those dresses at that shop. The kind you said cost too much when I mentioned it before."

She opened her lips to retort caustically that he couldn't buy the dress he'd mentioned then, because—

—She closed her mouth again, biting down on her underlip. "I'd love a dress, Adam," she said softly. "Or an Indian shawl, maybe. I've always wanted one of those. A black one, with red roses—they cost more than the Fiesta dress, of course."

By then, Adam had remembered that he had given "Ann's dress" to Pinky. And for the first time he knew that Ann knew, and had said nothing.

"The shawl is yours," he said, with the solemnity of a vow. "Or anything else you want, from now on."

She said nothing. They sat on in the growing dark, the mountains now were faintly haloed with orange; a few stars could be seen in the dome of the sky.

"If we do sell the house . . ." she said tentatively.

"It's sold!"

"Yes, I think so, too. But maybe it's all right, Adam. Maybe we should start over, build a new home and this time we'll make it ours . . . to stick."

He thought he understood her. "All new!" he agreed heartily. "Every idea ours—and brand new!"

"No-o," said Ann.

"No?"

"No," she affirmed. "I think we should include in our plans some features from all the other houses."

She stretched her hand to snap on the lamp beside the couch, then tucked her other hand into his coat to get the pad and pencil he kept there. There was a privileged intimacy about the gesture that set Adam's nerve ends quivering, and the warmth of his body under her fingers was reflected pink in Ann's cheeks. She bent her head over the pad and pencil.

"I think," she said, hurrying her words to conceal her confusion. "We should have a tree in the patio—like our first house in Kennerly. Laughter trembled in her voice. "And a lift-out drain in the sink!"

Adam's arm went around her shoulder, he leaned close—to watch her pencil. "Tea-box paper in the hall," she went on, "like in the Crescent house—and—well, Mexican tin light fixtures, as we have here."

"Anything you say, Mrs. Laird. You are a wonderful wife. And there's no woman on earth can come within ten miles of you."

"Provided," she decided, "I keep on being somewhat wonderful."

But she was pleased at his praise. Her cheeks were pink, her eyes starry. She got up to draw the curtains at the window.

One long step took him to where his arms could gather her close to him. He bent and kissed her. "Ann . . ." he said gruffly.

Let The Doctor Decide

By HERMAN M. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ARE you confused about antihistaminic drugs? Which one will do this, which will do that and which will do just about everything?

Well, with all the talk about antihistamines these days, I don't blame you. So, before you dash out to buy this or that drug, let me give you a few words of caution.

Histamine, you see, is a chemical which is normally present in your body. In some persons, it is the factor involved in allergic conditions such as hay fever, hives and other sensitivities.

Chemical Reaction

An antihistaminic drug, then, is a compound designed to combat this chemical reaction in your body which may make you more sensitive than others to specific conditions.

These drugs have a useful place in curing certain conditions if properly handled under competent medical supervision.

Since many of them produce side effects in certain individuals, they can cause injury in various ways. Side effects such as nausea, headaches, vomiting, drowsiness and poor coordination, for example, brought the first cargo of wine to America. Now don't tell us old Chris was a rum runner!

It is now estimated that a space station would cost more than $60 billion. Golly—wouldn't it be cheaper to bring the old-fashioned moon closer to earth?

For Rent—A Mosquito

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — If you ever want to rent a mosquito—and, pray tell, who doesn't—Lorraine D'Essen is just the young lady for you.

Mrs. D'Essen, a comely, hazel-eyed woman in her early 30s, has one of the oddest jobs in this oddest of all possible worlds. She is an animal talent scout.

In three years she has built up a $100,000-a-year business finding specially trained animals for the movies, television programs, advertising agencies and industrial firms.

Her casting bureau for animal actors now can draw on 750 furred of feathered creatures ranging in size from a sneering mouse to a dancing elephant.

"So far I haven't had a call for a tight-rope-walking trained whale," mused Mrs. D'Essen, "and, frankly, I'd just as soon I never do."

If she does get such a call, she might rise to the emergency. Her failures are few.

One example of the crises that arise almost daily in her unusual career: A studio sent a hurry-up call for a mosquito—in the middle of February.

"I finally located one in Florida, and had it flown here," recalled Mrs. D'Essen.

"The mosquito had had no special training, but proved a great natural talent. The scene called for a close-up of him biting a man's hand. He went through his role as if he had spent his life before a camera. The scene didn't require a single retake."

For this one performance the studio paid $100, making the mosquito perhaps the highest paid insect in history.

"What did we do with him?" said Mrs. D'Essen. "We turned him loose in the studio. I didn't feel like swatting him. Who wants to swat a $100-a-day performer?"

Her animal actors average $100 an appearance, whether it is for a moment, an hour, or a full day. Elephants, whose upkeep is more expensive, get the top rate—$750.

Mrs. D'Essen rents some of the animals from other trainers, keeps many of her own on a 37-acre farm at Gillette, N. J.

They often remain overnight in her four-story old brick home in Greenwich Village.

"We have an animal United Nations there," she said. "Right now we are keeping an American crow, a llama from Peru (he is named Lucky and has a girl friend named Linda), an English sheep dog, two Great Danes, a wombat named 'Mr. Wimpole' from Australia, a Siamese cat, and a Yorkshire Terrier called 'T. S. Elliot.'"

"All of them are real characters. Each animal has his own personality. If you take the trouble to understand his personality, then he usually will take the trouble to understand yours."

Her current favorite is the bird

Weldon-Brown Nuptial Rites Read In Presbyterian Church

Reception Follows In Pickaway Arms

Miss Margaret Weldon became the bride of James Brown at half after seven o'clock Saturday evening in the Presbyterian church.

The Rev. Donald Mitchell, pastor of the church, officiated at the ceremony. Two pedestal vases of white gladioli, large white chrysanthemums and white pompons provided the setting, against a background of palms and four candelabra. The aisle of the church was lined with candelabra holding white tapers, accented with satin bows.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Boggs Weldon of 137 W. Union St. Mr. Brown is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Brown of Cedar Heights Rd.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white Chantilly lace over ivory bridal taffeta. The bodice featured brief sleeves and abateau neckline while ivory satin folds formed the cummerbund waistline.

The extremely full circular skirt of lace was enhanced with a polka-anise bow of satin, which terminated in wide streamers, accented by the chapel train.

Her double tiered veil of illusion cascaded from a miniature pearl tiara. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white roses surrounded by white pompon chrysanthemums and white carnations.

Mrs. Clarence Peters Jr. was matron of honor, while Miss Ann Weldon of Evanston, Ill., cousin of the bride, and Miss Sally Eshelman served as bridesmaids. Mrs. David Blue was bridesmatron.

The attendants wore waltz-length dresses in aquamarine taffeta. The strapless long torsos were complimented by brief shrug jackets outlined with narrow bands of mink at the necklines. The bouffant skirts were softly shirred at the hipline.

Mink bandeaus served as headpieces for the attendants and they carried Colonial bouquets of pink roses as the center accent, surrounded by bronze pompon chrysanthemums and light pink carnations.

David Blue served as best man for Mr. Brown. The wedding guests were seated by Jack Humphry of Columbus, William Thompson and Richard Peters of Tarleton.

A reception in Pickaway Arms followed the ceremony. Mrs. Weldon received her guests in a dress of rose taffeta with matching accessories and accented with a corsage of pink roses and light pink carnations.

Mrs. Brown, mother of the groom, was attired in a beige lace dress over brown taffeta. She wore beige accessories and a corsage of yellow pompons.

The bride is a graduate of the Columbus School for Girls, while Mr. Brown is a graduate of Circleville High School.

Following the reception, the couple left on a two-week Western wedding trip.

Mrs. Young Hosts Open House Fete Of Two Birthdays

Eastern Star Sets Friendship Night

The Heber Chapter of Williamsport will be entertained in a friendship night program by the members of the Circleville Chapter of the Order of Eastern Star.

The event is scheduled for 8 p. m. Tuesday in the Masonic Temple. Special program and entertainment are being planned for the evening. Mrs. Wendell Turner and her committee will be in charge of refreshments.

American Indian Is Program Topic Of Church Society

A program on American Indian Missions highlighted a regular meeting of the Ashville Methodist Woman's Society of Christian Service, held in the church.

Mrs. James Hott presented a program on the topic "Missions Follow the Indian Trails". She told how Methodism had established missions on the Indian reservations. She noted that we still have Indians living in 47 states.

There is still a great need in the Indian Mission fields, according to Mrs. Hott, who included the records "I Believe" and "The Indian Love Call" in her program.

Mrs. Eugene Borrer read Psalm 23 and offered prayer during the devotions.

Mrs. Ralph Cloud presided over a business session and heard reports from the different committees. An annual chicken pie supper was set for Nov. 3.

The following committee served refreshments: Mrs. Virgil Six, Mrs. Clara Rihl, Miss Gladys Vause, Mrs. Glen Rader, Mrs. Ferguson.

Program On Stars Highlights Meet Of Couples Club

"Seeing Stars" was featured on the program when the Couples Club of Geneva Fellowship of the Presbyterian church met in the church social rooms Sunday evening.

The program was presented by Beau Stevenson, Ed Jury, Forest Croman and the Rev. Donald Mitchell. Through the use of a planetarium which cast a picture of the stars on the ceiling of the church sanctuary, the club studied the stars.

The activities of the evening's program closed on the manse lawn, where stars, viewed through a telescope, were discussed by Mr. Jury and Mr. Croman.

M. E. Patterson presided at a business session, when annual committees were named as follows:

Scrapbook, Mrs. Frank Wirth; evangelism, Charles Hart and Tom Thorne; publicity, Mrs. Patterson; Thanksgiving family, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Hines; captain of a "red" team, James Carr, and captain of a "blue" team, Hal Spencer.

Plans were made for a congregational dinner to be held Nov. 9 in the church. Devotions for the evening were presented by Hal Spencer.

Guests at the meeting included: Mrs. Warren Beaty, Mrs. Croman and Mrs. Jury. A refreshment committee for the session included: Mr. and Mrs. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. John Alderman and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Anderson.

George Cummins and Mrs. C. W. Ferguson.

Three County 4-H Girls Are Top Winners In State Contest

Mrs. Leora Sayre of the Pickaway County Extension Office has received word from the State 4-H Club Department that three of the Pickaway County entries in the state contest of the National Awards Program were selected by the committee as state winners.

Vonna Lee Bach, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Bach of Circleville Route 2, is the candidate selected to represent Ohio in a national safety contest and she has been awarded a trip to the National Club Congress.

Vonna has been a 4-H member for eight years and has carried projects in both the Monroe Stuchette and Future Farmers Clubs. According to her statement, health and safety is a perpetual project of its own in her clubs.

She has been a strong link in the cooperation involved, as was her sister, Miriam, who was a previous state winner and also attended National Congress.

This is the second year Vonna has been received as a member of the National Safety Council. At a recent county-wide recognition and barbecue, she also was presented a silver key as the "reserve champion" health winner.

Zoe Dell Riggins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Riggins of Circleville, is the candidate selected to represent Ohio in the Food Preservation by Canning contest. Zoe Dell has been a 4-H member for nine years and has carried many projects in food and sewing, as well as several in the miscellaneous category.

This year she was a member of the Cook, Sew, and Chatter Club of Circleville. Her canning activities, which included meats, vegetables, and fruits, was a cooperative project to one on meal preparation in which she prepared 162 meals.

Last September she was one of five county members elected to attend State Club Congress. By virtue of winning this State Canning Contest, she has been awarded a trip to National Club Congress in Chicago.

Nancy Cromley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Cromley of Ashville, and a Sophomore at Ohio State University, is the state awards winner in the national program for Food Preservation by Freezing.

As a winner in this activity, Nancy will receive a $50 bond as a state award and she is still in the running for the national contest. She has been a 4-H member for 10 years and has carried many projects in foods, sewing and livestock in the Duvall Go-Getters and Bloomfield Busy Bodies Clubs.

She possesses many sizes, colors and shapes of cups, ribbons, keys and medals which she has received for outstanding endeavor in the 4-H field of Cooperative Extension.

There are many award opportunities for 4-H members in club, county, state and nation. These are sponsored by well-known interested companies, groups, and individuals.

Program On Stars Highlights Meet Of Couples Club

"Seeing Stars" was featured on the program when the Couples Club of Geneva Fellowship of the Presbyterian church met in the church social rooms Sunday evening.

The program was presented by Beau Stevenson, Ed Jury, Forest Croman and the Rev. Donald Mitchell. Through the use of a planetarium which cast a picture of the stars on the ceiling of the church sanctuary, the club studied the stars.

The activities of the evening's program closed on the manse lawn, where stars, viewed through a telescope, were discussed by Mr. Jury and Mr. Croman.

M. E. Patterson presided at a business session, when annual committees were named as follows:

Scrapbook, Mrs. Frank Wirth; evangelism, Charles Hart and Tom Thorne; publicity, Mrs. Patterson; Thanksgiving family, Mr. and Mrs. Phil Hines; captain of a "red" team, James Carr, and captain of a "blue" team, Hal Spencer.

Plans were made for a congregational dinner to be held Nov. 9 in the church. Devotions for the evening were presented by Hal Spencer.

Guests at the meeting included: Mrs. Warren Beaty, Mrs. Croman and Mrs. Jury. A refreshment committee for the session included: Mr. and Mrs. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. John Alderman and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Anderson.

Three County 4-H Girls Are Top Winners In State Contest

Mrs. Leora Sayre of the Pickaway County Extension office has received word from the State 4-H Club Department that three of the Pickaway County entries in the state contest of the National Awards Program were selected by the committee as state winners.

Vonna Lee Bach, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Bach of Circleville Route 2, is the candidate selected to represent Ohio in a national safety contest and she has been awarded a trip to the National Club Congress.

Vonna has been a 4-H member for eight years and has carried projects in both the Monroe Stitche and Future Farmers Clubs. According to her statement, health and safety is a perpetual project of its own in her clubs.

She has been a strong link in the cooperation involved, as was her sister, Miriam, who was a previous state winner and also attended National Congress.

This is the second year Vonna has been received as a member of the National Safety Council. At a recent county-wide recognition and barbecue, she also was presented a silver key as the "reserve champion" health winner.

Zoe Dell Riggins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Riggins of Circleville, is the candidate selected to represent Ohio in the Food Preservation by Canning contest. Zoe Dell has been a 4-H member for nine years and has carried many projects in food and sewing, as well as several in the miscellaneous category.

This year she was a member of the Cook, Sew, and Chatter Club of Circleville. Her canning activity, which included meats, vegetables, and fruits, was a cooperative project to one on meal preparation in which she prepared 162 meals.

Last September she was one of five county members elected to attend State Club Congress. By virtue of winning this State Canning Contest, she has been awarded a trip to National Club Congress in Chicago.

Nancy Cromley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Cromley of Ashville, and a Sophomore at Ohio State University, is the state awards winner in the national program for Food Preservation by Freezing.

As a winner in this activity, Nan-

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democratic and Republican scouts are prowling the farm belt these October days checking the political temper of the farmers and then trying to project their readings into the 1956 presidential year in terms of votes.

No one yet has found a fool-proof method of discovering how the farmers will vote. Nor can one say confidently that farmers will vote as a bloc any more than druggists, electricians, fishermen and golfers. But the guessing game goes on and there is no vote which is studied, analyzed, watched, wooed and feared more by politicians than the farm vote.

At the present time, messages from the farm belt are reported to be encouraging to the Democrats because farmers are not happy about farm prices and their own economic position in relation to the industrial worker. The Republicans are concerned because a discontented farm belt could mean trouble at the polls.

One GOP scout, recently returned from a trip through the farm country, brought back this story: "I went back to my home and visited my brother on the farm where I was raised. When I was a kid, mother baked her own bread and milked our own cows. We canned fruit and all kinds of garden truck. We had fresh eggs and fresh butter and there were frying chickens running all around the place. We didn't have the modern conveniences, but we lived well."

"My brother gets his bread and butter from the store. He buys milk and eggs and frying chickens and canned food from the supermarket in town. He says it's cheaper that way. And maybe it is. I don't know."

"He's living better than he ever lived before—far better than we did as kids. He's even got power steering on his tractor."

"But he's sore because prices aren't what he thinks they should be. He says Ezra Benson (Secretary of agriculture) keeps telling farmers they have to expect a leveling off—but that nobody is saying the same thing to the industrial worker. And he doesn't like it."

The farm problem is vastly more complex than outlined in this capsule picture, of course, but it is a part of the whole.

There are about five million farmers in the country today. With their wives and children of voting age they probably total more than 12 millions. And how they vote is tremendously important.

County School Building Program Seen Well Within Financial Reach

Pickaway County, able to claim some of the finest farm lands in the state, should have little difficulty in financing a much needed building program for the county school system.

The Pickaway County Citizens Committee, formed to draw up a plan for proposed consolidation of county school districts, stressed this point today in its latest statement on the merger plan. The proposed consolidation awaits the decision of the voters at the polls next month.

After pointing out that Pickaway County should be able to support a good school building program, the committee continued:

"When consolidation of local school districts is approved by a vote of the qualified electors of the new district proposed to be created, the county board of education shall assign the assets and liabilities of the original districts to the new district so created and proceed to appoint a board of education for the new district in the same manner as is provided by section 331.26 of the Revised Code."

"UNDER THE plan of consolidation submitted for your approval at the November election, two new high schools are to be built."

"The responsibility for the locating of such sites as will be needed will rest with the newly appointed board of education. We wish to make it clear that the Citizens' Committee has no authority in the choice of sites. The construction of new buildings will only be possible when a bond issue for that purpose has been approved by the people of Pickaway County. This brings up the questions — 'How much will the new buildings cost?' and 'What effect will it have on the tax rate?'

"In answering these questions may we point out and emphasize that the figures we use, as to the probable cost of such buildings, are our own and that they are not necessarily those which may be the actual cost of construction as arrived at by the board of education and its advisors."

"Let us assume a figure of $1,250,000 as the probable cost of the construction of each building. On this basis the new building program would cost $2,500,000."

"Assuming that the bonds are sold to mature in 25 years and that the interest rate on such bonds is 3 percent, what will the millage rate be? The tax duplicate of the new district as of this year is $62,333.030. One mill levied against this sum will yield $62,333.03 annually, which will be sufficient to retire $1,000,000 in bonds in 25 years. Thus, on this basis at 2½ mill levy will support a $2,500,000 building program."

"Under the legal debt limit for new school building construction in Ohio, Pickaway County could support a $5,000,000 building program. Since this is double the probable building cost, the new school district can finance such a program without assuming too heavy a tax burden."

"The cost of such construction must be met by taxes on real estate. There is no other source available under Ohio laws. The state bond issue on the ballot at the coming election will offer no aid to Pickaway County schools, because, as we have shown above, Pickaway County is able to meet such an obligation within the legal debt limit."

Hillsboro Papers Being Moved

HILLSBORO — The Hillsboro Publishing Co., publisher of the Hillsboro Press-Gazette and Hillsboro News-Herald, is in the process of moving into its newly constructed home.

The moving process will be completed in three "takes" — over three weekends.

Last weekend, the stereotype and commercial printing departments were moved to the three-block distance. Next weekend, the composing room and business and editorial offices will make the hop.

Weekend after next, the big newspaper printing press will move.

H. E. (Dike) Barnes, publisher, said an "open house" will be scheduled in November.

The throng listened to their speeches, standing almost silent, giving no hint of favoritism for either man. You felt as though here was a giant jury gathered to pass judgment on the two parties.

The bulk of the farm vote went to Eisenhower. But the farm jury must judge again in a few more months. And the politicians are trying to find out whether the verdict will be the same.

East. The support of Egypt by Soviet Russia upsets the balance of power in the world. It must be assumed from past experience, and it is so assumed, that Russia would not provide arms to Egypt without making a secret agreement containing important political clauses.

Such clauses affect the future not only of Israel, but of Turkey and Greece and cannot but have an important effect upon all North African countries and Italy.

This means that the Mediterranean, which has been a Western lake, is no longer a Western lake and that NATO has been breached not out of Germany, as was anticipated, but out of Egypt, which was not expected.

In a word, the Geneva smiles are again frowns and the Russians have again won a major diplomatic victory while the West was paralyzed by the optimism engendered at Geneva.

It is astounding that this Russian formula should have been so regularly successful for 12 years since Stalin first used it at Teheran and that the Western statesmen, so anxious to avoid war, never learn anything, but regularly walk into the same trap. It must be said for Harry Truman that having smelled the bait in that trap, he kept away from it during the whole of his Presidency except for this one excursion into the unknown.

The Egyptian and Algerian imbrolios are more serious than appears on the surface. For one thing, they destroyed in August a status quo established and recognized in July.

Wallace Points To Two More New Laws, Effective Tuesday

Ed Wallace, Pickaway County state representative, called public attention today to two important state laws that go into effect Tuesday.

One of the new statutes, enacted by the 101st General Assembly, provides for regulation of public auction sales of new merchandise.

It requires any person, firm or corporation desiring to conduct such sales to obtain a license from the county auditor, listing an inventory and description of the new merchandise to be sold and the date and place. The license fee is $10 per day, to go to the county treasury. The applicant also must file bond.

Exempted from the law are such sales as livestock, produce, used farm machinery and other items commonly sold at farm sales, court sales and a regularly established public auction business, which files a personal property tax return in the county.

THE OTHER new regulation was approved as an amendment to Ohio law.

Only About 8 In Race For Football Crown

List Of Contenders Trimmed Sharply As Season Gets Start

By The Associated Press

The show is just starting, folks, but for most of the nation's college football teams it ended almost before it began.

Perhaps eight teams still were in the running for the mythical national championship today with the season only one third completed. This is the earliest mass exodus from contention in years.

For the likes of Army and UCLA, disappointment came early. Both were rated potential champions before the season started. But now they're in the back seat. UCLA still can win the Pacific Coast Conference title and play in the Rose Bowl, of course, but it is eliminated from consideration for the national crown because of its defeat by Maryland two weeks ago.

The big boy on the Coast right now is Washington, which has won four games without a defeat, including a stunning 7-0 conquest Saturday over Southern California — the club that was supposed to give UCLA a battle for the title.

The Huskies still must meet UCLA Nov. 12. That one could settle the Rose Bowl question.

As for Army, the Cadets had to swallow a particularly bitter pill when they dropped a 26-2 decision to Michigan. Never before in the five meetings before the two schools had the Wolverines whipped the Cadets.

Furthermore, there was a strong suspicion that if Army was invited to a bowl game, it would follow Navy's lead and accept. The West Point brass had high hopes for this club. The most distressing fact, from the Army viewpoint, is that the team did everything to help Michigan by fumbling nine times.

Ron Kramer, Michigan's top end, got bruised in the Army game and won't play against Northwestern this Saturday and he'll be missed. Luckily, Northwestern is about the weakest team on the remainder of the schedule for Michigan, rate as the outfit to beat in the Big Ten.

Besides Washington and Michigan, the teams still in the running for the national crown include Navy, Notre Dame, Oklahoma, Maryland, Duke and Georgia Tech. Navy and Notre Dame share one distinction. They are the only major teams in the land that haven't been scored on. The Mid-Idies — pending the clash against Army Nov. 26 — nailed down the Eastern title with their 21-0 victory over Pitt Saturday.

Notre Dame, of course, now is very much in contention. Its 14-0 victory over Miami — a team that had been pointing for the game for two seasons — proved that. And

Automatic Otto Gets Credit For Cleveland Brown Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The champion Cleveland Browns, who are finding it tough going in the National Football League this season, can be mighty thankful for their powers of persuasion that enticed Otto Graham out of retirement for another year.

Graham, who had planned to retire this year after leading the Browns to nine straight division titles, sparked an 87-yard touchdown march in the final minutes yesterday to defeat Philadelphia's touted Eagles 21-17.

The victory gave Cleveland a 2-1 record and raised them to a four-way tie for first place in the Eastern Division with Washington, Pittsburgh and the surprising Chicago Cardinals.

In a radical shift of the balance of power in the Western Division, Los Angeles shares the lead with the frisky Baltimore Colts by virtue of a 17-10 decision over the winless Detroit Lions. The defending Western titlists now occupy the cellar with the Chicago Bears. Baltimore defeated Green Bay's by Maryland two weeks ago.

Stranahan Cops First Pro Tourney

BALTIMORE (AP)—Frank Stranahan, who explained he became a professional golfer because it "means more" than playing as an amateur, clinched a $3,000 check today to prove his point.

The 33-year-old strong boy from Toledo picked it up yesterday as the victor's booty in the $17,000 Eastern Open over Baltimore's Municipal Mt. Pleasant Course.

It was the last tournament on the 1955 trail mapped out by the Professional Golfers' Assn. and Frank didn't cinch it until he dropped his final putt in the 72-hole event. It was his first victory as a pro.

quarterback Paul Hornung can handle himself with the best.

Oklahoma ran its winning streak to 22 games Saturday by downing Texas 20-0. The Sooners have left their toughest foes behind.

Maryland, No. 1 in the Associated Press poll, and Duke, the two behemoths of the Atlantic Coast Conference, don't meet. Both would like to get to the Orange Bowl New Year's Day, and if they both go undefeated, the conference will select the team by vote. Maryland probably would get the bid since Duke played there last Jan. 1.

The Terps won their fourth straight by smothering Wake Forest 28-7, while Duke clubbed William and Mary 47-7. Maryland tangles with North Carolina this week. Duke has a toughie in Ohio State. The Buckeyes walloped Illinois 27-12.

Georgia Tech, the class of the Southeastern Conference, had its troubles eking out a 7-0 victory over Louisiana Tech. Its big test will come two weeks hence against Duke.

Packers 24-20 Saturday night and, like the Rams, sports a spotless 3-0 record.

In Sunday's other action, the Pittsburgh Steelers handed the disappointing New York Giants their third straight defeat 30-23; the San Francisco 49ers scored a 20-19 triumph over the Bears; and the Cardinals hung a 24-10 defeat on the Redskins, their first.

With the Browns trailing 17-14 on their own 13-yard line and 4 minutes and 13 seconds left, Graham gambled on a fourth-down pass and hit end Dante Lavelli for 14 yards. A 36-yard run by Otto, a 2-yard pitchout and his 5-yard scoring pass to Lavelli gave the Browns the winning touchdown.

Graham also accounted for the other Cleveland touchdowns, scoring one and passing for the other. "He pulled us out," Coach Paul Brown said of automatic Otto, who came out of a short-lived retirement two weeks before the opening of the season, his 10th with the Browns.

It was a Graham-to-Lavelli pass one minute and 15 seconds before the game's end that brought Cleveland a 21-17 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles before 43,974 fans here yesterday. The 5-yard,

Ohio College Gridgers Set For New Test

COLUMBUS (AP)—Last week, in 10 interstate contests, Ohio college football teams broke even although losing five of seven on the road. The Buckeye clubs now have 20 wins, 15 losses and a tie in games with outsiders, leading in scoring by 631 to 494.

Top game in the Ohio Conference this week sends Heidelberg's defending champs against Capital to determine which will share the loop lead with Muskingum. The Muskies have three straight, and Heidelberg and Capital have a pair.

Here's the week's scheduled:

Thursday night: Morris Harvey at Youngstown.

Saturday afternoon: Duke at Ohio State, Miami at Marshall, Kent State at Ohio U., Marietta at Hiram, Otterbein at Wittenberg, Wooster at Denison, Heidelberg at Capital, Ohio Northern at Bluffton, John Carroll at Wayne, Bowling Green at Baldwin Wallace, Marquette at Cincinnati, Defiance at Kalamazoo, Central State at Kentucky State, Kenyon at Hobart, Ashland at Indiana Central, Ohio Wesleyan at Wabash, Allegheny at Oberlin, Washington (Mo.) at Western Reserve.

Saturday night: Western Michigan at Toledo, Mount Union at Akron, Xavier at Dayton, Georgetown at Wilmington, W. & J. at Muskingum, Findlay at West Virginia Tech.

third-down toss climaxed an 87-yard drive that included dashes of 19 and 36 yards by Graham and passes of 5 and 14 yards to Lavelli before the payoff pitch.

"When I saw him swing around that goalpost I knew we were in," Graham said of his scoring shot to Lavelli in the end-zone corner. "It was just a question then of laying the ball in his arms."

Lavelli said he "thought the ball never would come down"—that it "sort of hung in mid-air while my arms quivered for it."

Lavelli had cut to his left and reversed direction by swinging around the goal post, which in the pros game are on the goal line.

The Eagles, runner-up to the Browns in the Eastern Division the past three years and pre-season favorites to nose them out this year, had the National Football League champions in trouble most of the way because of two Cleveland fumbles.

The first fumble was by Ed Modzelewski late in the first quarter on the Browns' 21. Halfback Harry Dowda recovered for the Eagles, and Bobby Thomson passed 12 yards to Bobby Walston. Skipper Giancanelli ripped up the middle for six and two plays later carried a pitchout over from three yards out.

The second fumble was by Graham at 2:40 of the final quarter. Retreating from his own 42, Graham dropped the ball which tackle Frank Wydo picked up on about the Browns' 30 and carried to the 7.

Ex-Cincinnati Reds Pitcher Is Stab Victim

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Howie Fox, 34, who pitched for three major league baseball clubs, was stabbed to death after he ejected three young men from his tavern here early yesterday.

Two college students and another man were booked by police.

Witnesses said Fox was stabbed three times in front of his tavern and died crawling toward the door. His bartender, Hubert Callahan, 47, was critically slashed.

Booked for investigation of murder and assault to murder was John J. Strickland, 20, a San Antonio College student. Booked as material witnesses were Jack G. Allen, 21, also a student at the college, and Martin Belto, 27.

Strickland had a severe cut over his right eye caused, he told police, when he was struck by Fox

Walker Hoping To Keep Job

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Although Seattle manager Fred Hutchinson reportedly has the job all but nailed down, Harry (The Hat) Walker says he hasn't "given up hope" of being back next year as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

If the Cardinals' new general manager, Frank Lane, hasn't made up his mind about the 1956 pilot "that's all I can ask," Walker said.

"I don't know what I'll do if I lose out," the former Cardinals outfielder said, "but I think I can get a job in the top minors, if not the majors."

Hickman Finds He Enjoys Mondays Now

NEW YORK (AP)—Herman Hickman, 20 pounds lighter but friendly as ever, enjoys Mondays much more since he gave up coaching football and took up crystal ball gazing.

Every Friday evening the Tennessee-born amateur chef and professional raconteur takes to the air on CBS Radio to indulge in a little forecasting on which football teams are going to win Saturday.

Thus far Hickman is averaging .810 in picking winners.

How does he do it?

"Well," says Hickman, "for one thing I know a lot of coaches around the country. But I seldom ask a coach information about his own team. I ask him information about the other teams in his area—and preferably not a team his own team is playing the following week."

"A coach always rates his own team too high or too low. But he always rates his opponent too high."

"Crystal ball-gazing is certainly a lot more fun than coaching. In coaching you're stuck with the same team the following Monday. But in the crystal ball business you can forget all about 'em."

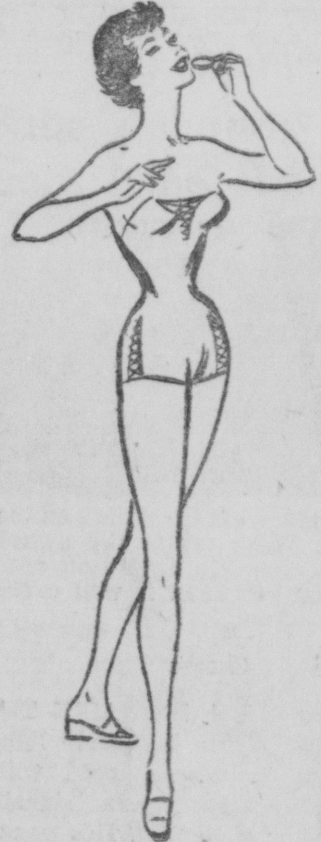

with what looked to him like a miniature baseball bat.

The 6-foot-3, 195-pound Fox pitched for Cincinnati in 1944 through 1946 and again from 1948 through 1951. He was with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1952 and the Baltimore Orioles in 1954.

Duke's Blue Devils Next For Buckeyes

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Blue Devils of Duke look big and boisterous as they head for Columbus and Saturday's intersectional football date with Ohio State's rebounding Bucks.

The undefeated Devils have hung up a neat three-game streak this year, while Ohio State has looked just so-so, compared with the 1954 powerhouse, in winning two of three. The Bucks, beaten 6-0 by Stanford the previous week, opened their Big Ten title defense Saturday by defeating Illinois 27-12.

Duke opened with a 33-7 win over North Carolina State, followed with a 21-0 victory over Tennessee, and then shellacked William and Mary 47-7 Saturday. William and Mary had lost by only a 7-0 score to Navy, which hasn't allowed a point in three games.

The Blue Devils were ranked 13th in the country last week, and their 101 to 14 scoring record should keep them up there. Ohio State has a 55-38 edge in scoring. A crowd of more than 82,000, perhaps matching last Saturday's sixth ranked stadium throng of 82,407, is expected.

Howard Cassady, Ohio State's All America halfback, has taken over the lead in the Big Ten scoring race.

Cassady scored a pair of touchdowns against Illinois to run his point total to 30 and climb past Michigan's Ron Kramer.

Walker Hoping To Keep Job

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Although Seattle manager Fred Hutchinson reportedly has the job all but nailed down, Harry (The Hat) Walker says he hasn't "given up hope" of being back next year as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

If the Cardinals' new general manager, Frank Lane, hasn't made up his mind about the 1956 pilot "that's all I can ask," Walker said.

"I don't know what I'll do if I lose out," the former Cardinals outfielder said, "but I think I can get a job in the top minors, if not the majors."

Hickman Finds He Enjoys Mondays Now

NEW YORK (AP)—Herman Hickman, 20 pounds lighter but friendly as ever, enjoys Mondays much more since he gave up coaching football and took up crystal ball gazing.

Every Friday evening the Tennessee-born amateur chef and professional raconteur takes to the air on CBS Radio to indulge in a little forecasting on which football teams are going to win Saturday.

Thus far Hickman is averaging .810 in picking winners. How does he do it?

"Well," says Hickman, "for one thing I know a lot of coaches around the country. But I seldom ask a coach information about his own team. I ask him information about the other teams in his area—and preferably not a team his own team is playing the following week."

"A coach always rates his own team too high or too low. But he always rates his opponent too high. "Crystal ball-gazing is certainly a lot more fun than coaching. In coaching you're stuck with the same team the following Monday. But in the crystal ball business you can forget all about 'em."

with what looked to him like a miniature baseball bat.

The 6-foot-3, 195-pound Fox pitched for Cincinnati in 1944 through 1946 and again from 1948 through 1951. He was with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1952 and the Baltimore Orioles in 1954.

Duke's Blue Devils Next For Buckeyes

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Blue Devils of Duke look big and boisterous as they head for Columbus and Saturday's intersectional football date with Ohio State's rebounding Bucks.

The undefeated Devils have hung up a neat three-game streak this year, while Ohio State has looked just so-so, compared with the 1954 powerhouse, in winning two of three. The Bucks, beaten 6-0 by Stanford the previous week, opened their Big Ten title defense Saturday by defeating Illinois 27-12.

Duke opened with a 33-7 win over North Carolina State, followed by a 21-0 victory over Tennessee, and then shellacked William and Mary 47-7 Saturday. William and Mary had lost by only a 7-0 score to Navy, which hasn't allowed a point in three games.

The Blue Devils were ranked 13th in the country last week, and their 101 to 14 scoring record should keep them up there. Ohio State has a 55-38 edge in scoring. A crowd of more than 82,000, perhaps matching last Saturday's sixth ranked stadium throng of 82,407, is expected.

Howard Cassady, Ohio State's All America halfback, has taken over the lead in the Big Ten scoring race.

Cassady scored a pair of touchdowns against Illinois to run his point total to 30 and climb past Michigan's Ron Kramer.

Kramer, injured in the Army game, was shut out and slipped to second place with 25 points.

Walnut, Ashville, Darby Teams Victorious In Football Contests

Ashville's Broncos stepped back into a first place tie with Jackson by rolling over Stoutsville 34 to 6 Saturday night.

Walnut's Tigers, defending champions, finally won their first game of the season - but did it in convincing style byouncing Williamsport 44 to 12. In the final game of the triple header, and one of the most interesting of the evening, Darby's Trojans climbed into a tie with Pickaway by edging the Pirates 13 to 6.

Ashville-Stoutsville
The Broncos scored in each period to hand the Indians their second loss in three starts. Ashville won three straight.

Four different Broncos figured in their scoring. Dick Hoover had two touchdowns, while Lon Cromley, Don Foreman and Bobby Bartholomew each had one. Bartholomew kicked the extra points.

Coach Kermit McCafferty's Indians just could not cope with the Broncos. Bill Martin scored their lone touchdown in the second period.

Walnut-Williamsport
The winning Tigers, who counted only two touchdowns in their first two games, exploded against inexperienced Williamsport. Eddie Stutler scored three times for the winners, while team-mates Paul Tussing and Gene Van Pelt each hit pay dirt twice.

The Deers, who got a tough break at the start of the season (a new coach, Roy Hutcheson, came in and the Deers had only a few days practice) had Earl Christopher score their only two touchdowns.

Darby-Pickaway
The Trojans, who have been coming along very slowly, pulled an upset in edging the Pirates, who have been riddled with injuries. Even the return of Neil Ecard, Pickaway's top back from last year, could not stem the tide.

Ronnie Guthell scored what turned out to be the winning touchdown in the third period. Each team scored once in the opening quarter - Ned Musselman for Darby and Ecard for Pickaway. Musselman added the extra point.

Walnut and Stoutsville hands performed during their respective halftimes. Walnut used the theme of "Hear Them Bells", while Stoutsville used a Western theme. SCORES were as follows:

Walnut	44	12	12	20	0	44
Williamsport	0	0	0	0	0	12
Touchdowns: Walnut—Stutler 3, Tussing 2, Van Pelt, 2; Williamsport—Christopher 2.
Extra Points: Walnut—Stutler.
Ashville	34	7	14	6	0	34
Stoutsville	0	0	0	0	0	6
Touchdowns: Ashville—Cromley, Hoover 2, Foreman, Bartholomew; Stoutsville—Martin.
Extra points: Ashville—Bartholomew.
Darby	13	6	0	0	0	14
Pickaway	0	0	0	0	0	6
Touchdowns: Darby—Musselman, Guthell; Pickaway—Ecard.
Extra points: Darby—Musselman.

This is the sensational carpet that the Alexander Smith people ran a 78-ton crane over...without hurting its springy pile in the least! It makes you want to curl up and take a nap on it.

This is luxury in every sense of the word...except price! We frankly don't know how Alexander Smith can make it to sell for so little. We do know you can't match it in any other carpet within several dollars per square yard of this price. So be sure to stop in and see it, in the beautiful sun-fast colors we will show you.

The Alexander Smith line, this year, pays handsome tribute to the dozens of cost-saving machine processes they've built into their great new factory. These are the best of a long line of famous carpetings. They're priced low...from $6.95 yd., for durable blends, up to frankly luxury Wiltons and deep-pile Axminsters in the $15-$20 yd. class.
